HOW NEWTON IS GOVERNED

14th of a Series of Articles Explaining the Management of the City

The department of the city which yields a profit to the municipality is that of water. And yet, I believe that our citizens their water bills with great cheerfulness, for its quality is second to none in the Commonwealth. This department is based on bi-monthly examinations of our city water by the Board of Health, which indicate the water is many times greater than that of the metropolitan water. It has iron, and is rather better in iron and nitrates than many other water supplies.

The water is obtained from about 1200 tons of coal each year. Applications for service connection are made to the water Commissioner, and require the deposit with the City Treasurer of the estimated cost of the work from the street line to the desired point. The work from the street line to the main is done at the expense of the City. After the service is laid the actual cost is determined and the account adjusted, any unexpended balance being returned to the applicant. The service pipe is about 8000 feet in length, and the water flows by gravity through a pipe to the pump well on Newton side. Since 1913, an auxiliary pump raising water from a well has furnished a fine supply water, more than offsetting the diminished flow of the old conduit caused by the gradual silting up of the stream surrounding it. Two pump-engines, a Barr with a capacity of one million gallons of water in twenty-four hours, and a Worthington with a capacity of five million gallons, force the water into the main system, which includes over 157 miles of pipes. The excess of water consumed on the system is the four and one half million gallons covered reservoir on the top of a hill, which acts as a storage regulating basin.

The covered reservoir is nearly high enough to furnish pressure in about every dwelling in this city, although the flow of water is small and slow in upper stories of houses on top of higher hills. On the level places the main line of railroad for instance, the pressure is about 115 lbs to the square inch or a force of sending a stream of water the tops of the highest buildings. The average daily consumption of water in Newton is 2,957,000 gallons, in extreme drought sometimes less 4,800,000 gallons. The city is right to use, subject to some regulations, eight million gallons of water in 24 hours from the Charles water shed, and this limit will probably be reached by 1935.

The department at present is under control of a Water Commissioner, appointed by the Mayor and confirmed by the Aldermen. Two clerks are employed at the office at City Hall, and another at the commodious pipe and stable on Edinboro street,

The traffic census which is noted in another column clearly shows that there is more travel thru Newtonville square than thru Nonantum square, if the street cars are eliminated. This is probably due to the fact that the average driver of both horse and motor vehicles has learned the lesson of passing around Nonantum square whenever possible. The enormous growth of motor traffic is probably realized but the increase is undoubtedly more than was anticipated. It is likely, however, that returns from all over the state will reduce the percentage shown by the Newton figures.

The Republican out on Saturday at Riverside, altho held at a time when large numbers of Newton Republicans were away, was quite a success, largely due to the untiring efforts of Mr.
Fred H. Kerwin, chairman of the Waltham Republican committee.
While the speeches were more or less interrupted by the passing trains and shifting of engines, the greater portion of the crowd were able to hear what was said and to give the prominent men of the party their hearty applause.

Attention is being called this week in the Boston press to the probability of many voters losing their suffrage at the coming primary, on account of the new form of ballot and the prohibition against voting for candidates of but one party. If Newton voters will appreciate the fact that the primary vote is simply one to NOMI-NATE and not to elect the candidates, they will understand that they must confine their primary votes to but one party.

Next week will bring back nearly all our residents who have been away during the summer and Newton will begin to look natural once more.

WANTED: FLOWER NAMES

Prof. Jepson Wants the People to give Names to the myriad Flowers
of Our National Parks.

"We must have more common names more folk names, for the multitude of flowering plants in our National Parks," says Prof. W. L. Jepson, of the University of California. "By a folk name, I mean a name that has been given to the plant by the folk, by the people who have lived amongst the plants, and known them from their point of view. Of course the botanist has named practically all of the plants in the parks. He has given them scientific names, but these very rarely make an appeal to the people at large.
When once you have folk names then the interest in the flower fields will be very much greater. Take mountain miser, for example, which is found in the Yosemite Park and the Sequoia Park. That at once shows the flavor of the soil. There are many such names, but many more must be invented either by us or by the people who live in the mountains or live in the parks."

"I was coming down out of the mountains on a trip, and I had been studying what we botanists call Calandrina caulescens var. menziesii, and I met some children that had in their hands a bunch of the flowers. I stopped and asked the children what they called those flowers. After some little hesitation they said, 'Kisses.' I asked them why they called them kisses, and they either would not or could not tell. But as I went on I told the elder child say, 'That is a beauty man, and he is always asking why.'

"You can not always tell why. Sometimes you just do things. A mountain name, like mountain misery, at one makes an appeal to the people.
Common names indicate the way in which the plants have affected the people who live there, whether they are conscious of that or not.

"Imagine the thoughts of a person going to the meadows and seeing the mountain grass filled with shooting stars. I have seen as many as half a million shooting stars in one Sierra meadow. Now, when that plant becomes known it will become as famous as the edelweiss."

SHUBERT THEATRE—That "Experience" is going to create a sensation in Boston, set everybody talking, start controversy, and probably do the community good, was immediately evident at the first performance last Saturday night.

The theatre was completely filled,
the audience represented every walk in life, and the enthusiasm and admiration were unstinted.

From the popular point of view the affair was a triumph. It was in many respects one of the biggest openings
Boston has ever had.

There would be fewer divorces if all husbands and wives could be their own bosses.

A TRAVELER'S GUIDE TO THE PA- CIFIC COAST

Attractive Guidebook Published by the Geological Survey

Immediately after the publication of its Northern Pacific Guidebook (Bulletin 611) the United States Geological Survey announces the issue of a guidebook covering the Shasta Route and Coast line, embracing the territory from Seattle to Los Angeles. Its title is "Guidebook of the Western United States, Part D. The Shasta Route and Coast Line" (Bulletin 614), and it comprises 142 pages, 19 topographic maps, 33 reproduced photographs, and 15 text figures. This book is written in the same popular vein as the other Survey guidebooks, and as the country which it covers presents many notable scenic and geological features and is pregnant with interesting history and tradition, the volume promises to be one of the most successful of the series. Secretary Lane, himself a Californian, is especially hopeful that everyone who traverses the Pacific coast will utilize and appreciate this guidebook and through it come to a fuller understanding not only of the vast resources of the Pacific coast region but of its unrivaled scenic wonders. Turning the pages of this book, through which are liberally interspersed topographic maps and illustrations, the traveler finds interpreted for him in simple language, while the railroad train whisks him along, many things of interest that would otherwise be inexplicable.

To travel through our great West in company with a geologist gifted with the power of expression and explanation is a rare privilege. The pages of the Geological Survey's guidebooks offer an even more unusual privilege, for the information they contain is the product of many minds and comprises a vast amount of geologic, botanical, and general information, given in a simple and interesting way. The guidebook maps show clearly the topographic features along the route, which include gigantic extinct volcanoes whose origin and early history are told in the accompanying pages. Bold cliffs that tower a thousand feet above the train may have been formed by the outpourings of these ancient volcanoes, which though blazing with fire millions of years ago are now carpeted with everlasting snow and ice. The broad valleys which here and there stretch before the traveler's eye and which are covered with thriving orchards and fields of grain may have been in times past arms of the sea.

One of the interesting side trips described in the guidebook is that to Lassen Peak. In one illustration in the guidebook this rejuvenated volcano is photographed in active eruption, and another view shows a party of visitors standing on the brink of the yawning, smoking crater recently formed.

It is not difficult to believe that the Survey guidebooks will double the interest of the intelligent traveler in his trip.

The book is for sale by the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., at $1 a copy.

SCHOOL CHILDREN FIND INTER- EST IN MAP OF BOSTON BAY.

Prof. Jepson Wants the People to give Names to the myriad Flowers
of Our National Parks.

The intrinsic worth of the Geological Survey's topographic atlas sheets
as a means of education for school children is but little appreciated.
Engineers have long realized the excellence of the survey maps, automobilists and hikers have become educated to them, but the stimulus they afford to school children not only in the study of geography but of history and American literature is yet to be recognized.

A careful study of the Survey's atlas sheet of Boston and vicinity, for example, will convince the progressive teacher of the unlimited possibilities in this map. Of course the central feature of the map is the historic city of Boston, situated on the well-sheltered harbor of Boston Bay. Here was held the Boston Tea Party, while not far off to the west was "fired the shot heard round the world." Probably every school child in New England knows the story of Paul Revere's ride and doubtless many of them can recite Longfellow's famous poem; if you are familiar enough with Boston to point out to them the exact location of the Old North Church, where the signal light was hung for Paul Revere, they will be delighted.

In Cambridge can be seen the location of Harvard University, and farther north on the map is Tufts College.
The boy will perhaps be more interested in the Charlestown Navy Yard, however, or that famous summer resort, Nantasket Beach. He will find it hard to believe you when you tell him that in Emerson's time bathing there was little appreciated and the beach was so lonesome in summer that the poet withdrew there after graduation to spend his time in study and contemplation.

These are but a few of the interesting thoughts suggested by a Geological Survey map. The map of Boston and vicinity is double the size of the standard sheets and sells for 20 cents a copy. Orders should be addressed to the Director, U. S. Geological Survey, Washington, D. C., and accompanied by remittance.

REAL ESTATE

Edmonds & Byfield report the passing of papers, transferring the estate,

William H. Ratcliffe of Jamaica Plain,
Pres. of the Thomas G. Plant Shoe Co., who will occupy after alterations.
Property consists of large modern house, garage and about 25,000 feet of land, and is valued at about $20,000.

A Camel's Stomach.

The stomach of a camel is divided into four compartments, and the walls of these are lined with large cells, every one of which can be opened and closed at will by the means of powerful muscles, explains a writer in the Presbyterian. When a camel drinks it drinks a great deal, indeed, it drinks for such a long time you really would think it never meant to leave off.
The fact is that it is not satisfying its thirst, but is filling up its cistern as well. One after another the cells in its stomach are filled with the water, and as soon as each is quite full it is tightly closed. Then when few hours later the animal becomes thirsty, all that it has to do is to open one of the cells and allow the water to flow out. Next day it opens one or two more cells, and so it goes on day after day until the whole supply is exhausted.
In this curious way a camel can live five or even six days without drinking at all, and so is able to travel quite easily through the desert, where the wells are often hundreds of miles apart.

Falling Bodies.

Men from the Michigan College of Mines made some interesting experiments with falling bodies in the deep vertical shaft of a copper mine at Cut-met, which, says Machinery, has three of the deepest shafts in the world.
The experimenters tried to drop into a box of clay 4,200 feet below two metal balls two inches in diameter, one from the center of a shaft nine feet wide and thirty feet long and one from the southwest corner of it. Neither of the balls reached the box of clay. One was never found, the other, probably the one dropped from the center, was found lodged in the timbers in the east side of the shaft, 800 feet from the surface. In fact, bodies dropped into the shaft invariably lodged in the east wall, because the earth rotates on its axis from west to east. If most of it would cling to the side of the shaft or land on the levels to the east.

Tommy Atkins.

The use of the name Tommy Atkins, applying to the British soldiers, dates back to the Indian mutiny. In 1857 when the rebellion broke out in Lucknow all the Europeans fled to the Residency. On their way they came upon a private of the Thirty-second regiment (Duke of Cornwall's Light infantry) on sentry duty at an outpost. They urged him to make his escape with them, but he would not do so and was killed.
His name happened to be Thomas Atkins, and so throughout the mutiny campaign he was known as "Tommy Atkins."

Shall the Proposed Amendment to the Constitution Enabling Women to Vote be Approved and Ratified

YES

TWELVE SUFFRAGE REASONS

To the Editor:

This summer equal suffrage is discussed almost as widely as the war.

Julia Ward Howe gave twelve reasons why women should vote: (1) It gives women a position of increased dignity and influence; (2) It leads to improvements in the laws; (3) Women can bring their influence to bear on legislation more quickly and with less labor; (4) It often defeats bad candidates; (5) It broadens women's minds and leads them to take a more intelligent interest in public affairs;

(6) It makes elections and political meetings more orderly; (7) It makes it easier to secure liberal appropriations for educational and humanitarian purposes; (8) It opens to women important positions now closed to them;
(9) It increases the number of women chosen to such offices as are already open to them; (10) It raises the average of political honesty among the voters; (11) It tends to modify a too exclusively commercial view of public affairs; (12) It binds
the family more closely together, through their having ideas and interests in common.

It is being seen with more and more clearness that suffrage distinctly lessens the moral influence of women and puts the power gained through the increase of the electorate into the hands of the boss, male or female, who can control the largest female vote.

ANOTHER SUFFRAGE DEFEAT

Suffrage has just been defeated in the Alabama legislature. This is the twenty-third legislature to defeat women's suffrage since last

WAKING IT UP

Harold D. Wilson of Somerville, Prov. "Live" Candidate for County Treasurer.

Harold D. Wilson, of Somerville, the energetic young Cambridge and Somerville newspaperman, who is seeking the Republican nomination for county treasurer, is giving the old county ring the shock of its life by the strenuousness of his campaign. He is placarding every town in the county with catchy, original posters and claims that he will stump every city and hamlet in the county before the primaries, Tuesday, Sept. 21.

In a recent interview with one of our reporters he stated as follows:

"We are on the dawn of a new Republicanism, revitalized Republicanism, which will sweep the G. O. P. back into power in the entire United States as well as in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

"Young men must take the places of the old war horses who are years behind their time. While these old men have done valiant work in the past, they are no longer able to conduct a vigorous campaign in behalf of the party. It is time for them to assume the role of counsellors and let the younger men shoulder the brunt of battle. If they are unwilling to step aside graciously, after monopolizing party favor for so many years, then they must be forcibly relegated to the rear.

"The state wisely limits by law the tenure of office of a state treasurer to five years. Banks and large corporations are daily learning through bitter experience the folly of letting the same men handle large sums of money year after year. Two terms, that is six years, or nine years at the most, should be long enough for any county treasurer to serve.

"Quoting a very prominent and well-known bank president who lives in Cambridge: 'If the Republicans don't get busy and clean out that old moss-covered, arrogant county ring the Democrats will do it for us. They have already elected a district attorney.'

Harold David Wilson of Somerville was born in Cawker City, Kan., 1884; resident of Somerville for 12 years; educated in Arms Academy and Tufts College; three years' experience with Bradstreet Financial Agency, during which time he came in contact with some of the largest banking and business concerns in Greater Boston. He is treasurer of the Somerville Publishing Company, Inc., and Manager and Editor of the Somerville News; also President, Treasurer, Manager and Editor of the Cambridge Gridiron.

The Exploits of Elaine

A Detective Novel and a Motion Picture Drama

By ARTHUR B. REEVE

The Well-Known Novelist and the Creator of the "Craig Kennedy" Stories

Presented in Collaboration With the Pathé Players and the Eclectic Film Company

SYNOPSIS.

The New York police are mystified by a series of murders and other crimes. The principal clue to the criminal is the warning letter which the victim receives, written with a clutching hand. The last victim of the mysterious assassin is Taylor Dodge, the insurance president. His daughter, Elaine, employs Craig Kennedy, the well-known scientist, to endeavor to unravel the mystery. What Kennedy and his accomplices tell him is that his friend Jameson, a newspaper man, perished at the determined effort which Elaine and Craig Kennedy made to expose the Clutching Hand as the criminal. The Clutching Hand, as the strange criminal is known, resorts to all sorts of the most diabolical schemes to put the star in the way. Each chapter of the story tells of a new and more terrible crime and of the way the great detective uses all his skill to save this pretty girl and himself from death.

NINTH EPISODE

THE DEATH RAY.

Kennedy was reading a scientific treatise one morning, while I was banging on the typewriter, when a knock at the laboratory door disturbed us.

By some intuition Craig seemed to know who it was. He sprang to open the door, and there stood Elaine Dodge and her lawyer, Perry Bennett.

Instantly Craig read from the startled look on Elaine's face that something dreadful had happened.

"Why—what's the matter?" he asked solicitously.

"A—another letter—from the Clutching Hand!" she exclaimed breathlessly.

Craig took the letter and we both read, with amazement:

"Are you an enemy of society? If not, order Craig Kennedy to leave the country by nine o'clock tomorrow morning. Otherwise a pedestrian will drop dead outside his laboratory every hour until he leaves."

The note was signed by the now familiar sinister hand, and had added to it a postscript which read:

"As a token of his leaving, have him place a vase of flowers in his laboratory window today."

"What shall we do?" queried Bennett, evidently very much alarmed at the letter.

"Do?" replied Kennedy, laughing contemptuously at the apparently futile threat, "Why, nothing. Just wait."

We got up as usual the next day, and quite early went over to the laboratory. Kennedy, as was his custom, plunged straightway into his work and appeared absorbed by it, while I wrote.

"There is something queer going on, Walter," he remarked. "This thing registers some kind of wireless rays—infra-red, I think—something like those that they say that Italian scientist, Ulli, claims he has discovered and called the 'F-rays'."

"How do you know?" I asked, looking up from my work. "What's that instrument you are using?"

"A bolometer, invented by the late Professor Langley," he replied, his attention riveted on it.

Some time previously Kennedy had had installed on the window ledge one of those mirror-like arrangements, known as a "busybody," which show those in a room what is going on in the street.

As I moved over to look at the bolometer I happened to glance into the "busybody" and saw that a crowd was rapidly collecting on the sidewalk.

"Look, Craig!" I called hastily. He hurried over to me and looked. We could both see in the busybody mirror a group of excited passers-by bending over a man lying prostrate on the sidewalk.

The excited crowd lifted him up and bore him away, and I turned in surprise to Craig. He was looking at his watch.

It was now only a few moments past nine o'clock!

Some time later our door was suddenly flung open and Elaine and Perry Bennett arrived.

"We just heard of the accident!" she cried, fearfully. "Isn't it terrible? What had we better do?"

For a few moments no one said a word. Then Kennedy began carefully examining the bolometer and some other recording instruments he had, while the rest of us watched, fascinated.

Somehow that "busybody" seemed to attract me. I could not resist looking at it from time to time as Kennedy worked.

I was scarcely able to control my excitement when again I saw the same scene enacted on the sidewalk before the laboratory. Hurriedly I looked at my watch. It was ten o'clock.

"Craig!" I cried. "Another!"

Instantly he was at my side, gazing eagerly. There was a second innocent pedestrian lying on the sidewalk while a crowd, almost panic-stricken, gathered about him.

"It's no use," he muttered, as we gathered about him. "We're beaten. I can't stand this sort of thing. I will leave tomorrow for South America."

I thought Elaine Dodge would faint at the shock of his words coming so soon after the terrible occurrence outside. She looked at him speechless.

porters, we quickly climbed the gangplank.

"In there," pointed Kennedy, quickly to the porters, indicating our stateroom, which was an outer room. "Come, Walter."

I followed him in with a heavy heart.

Outside could be seen the two sinister faces in the crowd watching intently, with eyes fixed on the stateroom. Finally one of the crooks boarded the ship hastily, while the other watched the two porters come out of the stateroom and pause at the window, speaking back into the room as though answering commands.

Then the porters quickly ran along the deck and down the plank to get the rest of the luggage.

They took a small, but very heavy box and, hugging and tugging, hastened toward the boat with it. But they were too late. The gangplank was being hauled in.

They shouted, but the ship's officers waved them back.

The porters argued. But it was no use. All they could do was to carry the box back to the Dodge car.

Miss Dodge was just getting in as they returned.

"What shall we do with this and the other stuff?" asked the Irish porter.

She looked at the rest of the tagged luggage and the box which was marked:

Scientific Instruments Valuable

Handle With Care!

"Here—pile them in there," she said, indicating the taxicab. "I'll take care of them."

Meanwhile one of our sinister-faced friends had just had time to regain the shore after following us aboard ship and strolling past the window of our stateroom. He paused long enough to observe one of the occupants studying a map, while the other was opening a bag.

"They're gone!" he said to the other valet.

Elaine quickly told the story as I had told her.

Had she known it, however, Bennett's

Craig donned the rough clothes of the porter and added a limp and a wig. The same sort of exchange of clothes was made by me, and Craig clapped a Vandike beard on my chin.

"Mum's the word," cautioned Kennedy. "You must smuggle us out of the house some way."

Kennedy lost no time in confirming the suspicions of his bolometer as to the cause of the death of the innocent victims of the machinations of the Clutching Hand.

Both of them, he had learned, had been removed to a nearby undertaking shop, awaiting the verdict of the coroner. We sought out the shop and prevailed on the undertaker to let us see the bodies.

As Kennedy pulled down the shroud from the face of the first victim he disclosed on his forehead a round, dark spot about the size of a small coin. Quickly he moved to the next coffin and, uncovering the face, disclosed a similar mark.

"What is it?" I asked, awe-struck.

"Why," he said, "I've heard of a certain Vietnamese, one LeCroix, I believe, who has discovered, or perfected, an infra-red ray instrument which shoots its power a great distance with extreme accuracy and leaves a mark like there."

We thanked the undertaker for his courtesy and went out.

Meanwhile Elaine had called up Perry Bennett.

"Mr. Bennett," she exclaimed over the wire, "just guess who called on me?"

"Who?" he answered; "I give it up."

"Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Jameson," she called back.

"Is that so?" he returned. "Isn't that fine? I didn't think he was the kind to run away like that. How did it happen?"

Elaine quickly told the story as I had told her.

valet, Thomas, was at that very moment

REPUBLICAN OUTING

The Republicans of this senatorial district held a successful outing on Saturday last at the Riverside Recreation Grounds. While the Boston papers stated that about 500 or 600 were present and the Waltham papers said at least 2000, it would be a good guess to say that from 800 to 1000 attended the affair.

A program of sports under the direction of Senator N. A. Tufts of Waltham, preceded the speaking of the afternoon, and included a game of ball between the Waltham Watch Factory team which defeated the Beaver A. A. of Waltham by a score of 11 to 6, aquatic sports and exhibition of tennis. Raymond Mills of Waltham was the star performer in the water, winning the fifty yard swim, second place in the tub race, and was a member of the team winning the relay race.

The crowd included most of the candidates for office at the coming primary, including Messrs. McCall and Cushing, candidates for governor, Messrs. Ham and Coolidge, candidates for Lieutenant-governor, Senator Bagley, candidate for state auditor, County Commissioner Chester B. Williams and his rival, Mr. John L. Dyer of Cambridge, County Treasurer Joseph O. Hayden and his rival, Mr. Harold Wilson of Somerville, Sheriff Fairbairn, quite a number of his deputy sheriffs, and Mr. A. B. Messer, who is giving the sheriff quite a fight for the nomination this year. Councillor Henry C. Mulligan, Senator Geo. H. Ellis and Representatives J. Weston Allen and Thomas Weston, Jr., were also on hand to meet their numerous friends.

The speakers were Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Mr. McCall, Mr. Cushing, Mr. Ham, Mr. Coolidge, Congressman Carter and Mr. Edward A. Thurston, chairman of the state committee. Mr. Fred H. Kerwin, chairman of the Waltham city committee, to whose untiring efforts the success of the outing was due, presided and introduced the various speakers.

ADVISERS AT TECH.

Five Newton young men, Arthur K. Atkins of 311 Lowell avenue, Newtonville, Malcolm C. Brock of 228 Langley road, Newton Centre, Charles W. Lawrence and Peter M. String of Auburndale and Robert W. Van Kirk, Jr., of 14 Webster street, West Newton, have been named student advisers to the Freshmen who are to enter the Massachusetts Institute of Technology this fall. The appointment of a group of these young men who are already familiar with the Institute and the city of Boston is in accordance with a plan that has been developed by the Technology Christian Association, which is a very active organization at the Institute. Each of the Student advisers has a number of Freshmen under his care at the beginning of the year, and he will see that they are properly registered, suitable homes found for them and familiarity acquired as quickly as possible with the city in which they are to live for a few years. Incidentally there will be established a close relationship between the members of the different classes.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE—The Castle Square Theatre will open Labor Day matinee with "Common Clay" by Cloves Kinkead, last season's success. John Craig has decreased. This play had its New York premier last week in somewhat changed form and it registered a tremendous hit at the Republic Theatre.

Miss Mary Young and John Craig will take their old roles of Ellen Neal and Judge Filson when the play opens. All the old favorites have been retained in the cast.

Following "Common Clay", Mr. Craig will present all the New York successes for the remainder of the season.

Ministers are not the only men who marry for money.

FRUIT THEIVES

Can stealing fruit be stopped? Obviously not under existing conditions. Year after year fruit orchards are raided by boys and there seems to be no special effort to prevent it. Why are the boys so bold? Because they know that nobody but an officer has a right to lay hands on them, and they find little difficulty in evading the officers. If the owner appears on the scene the boys will thumb their noses and defy them to touch them. I have been told by those who have had that experience. I have had two cases where I knew whom the boys were. After notifying their parents without any effect and the officers with no better results, I have taken the matter into my own hands, put them into court, and they were simply put on probation. What do they care about being put on probation?

Several parties have told me that they were cutting their fruit trees down because the boys stole the fruit. A fine commentary on existing conditions. As our police force either isn't equal to the emergency or hasn't sufficient encouragement and backing from the fruit owners to instill in them a desire to prosecute more vigorously the suppression of this evil, some other method seems imperative. My suggestion would be to appoint every owner of fruit trees a special police for his own property, which would invest him with authority to arrest trespassers. Bring the culprit into court and inflict a heavy fine. The parents would soon tire of paying fines and would co-operate with the police in their effort.

Dexter Brackett was widely known as a hydraulic engineer and was recognized as an authority in many branches of water works engineering. He served for forty-six years in the engineering departments of the city of Boston and of the Metropolitan Water Works, and had taken a prominent part in the development of the piping system and other works within the city.

After twenty-six years' service with the city of Boston, Mr. Brackett was called to take charge of the distribution department of the Metropolitan Water Works, which included the piping system, pumping stations and reservoirs within the metropolitan district, and he was largely responsible for the excellence of these works. The pumping stations at Chestnut Hill and Spot Pond have been visited by engineers from all parts of the country and are regarded as models of efficiency. In 1907 Mr. Brackett became chief engineer of the Metropolitan Water Works, and held the position to the time of his death. In this capacity he has had charge of the maintenance and operation of the works and of the construction of additions, including the successful hydro-electric plant at the Wachusett Dam at Clinton. He was also responsible for the design of a similar plant now under construction at the Sudbury Dam at Southborough.

One of the important reforms which took place while Mr. Brackett held the position of chief engineer, and largely through his efforts, was the introduction of water meters in the cities and towns of the metropolitan district, which has reduced the water consumption to such an extent that the district now has a supply of water adequate for many years. It was estimated recently that the water consumption with the use of meters is less than two-thirds of what it would have been had the meters not been introduced. Without the meters it would have been necessary before this to have obtained an additional supply of water at great cost.

Mr. Brackett was a member and for three years a director of the American Society of Civil Engineers. He was president of the Boston Society of Civil Engineers and of the New England Water Works Association, and a member of the American Water Works Association. He had written several valuable papers upon water works subjects.

MR. CAPEN TO MARRY

Invitations have been issued for the wedding on Sept. 15, at 8 P. M., of Miss Julia Raymond Schmalz, Wellesley, 1914, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Barnes Schmalz of Wellesley and William Henry Capen, Harvard 1913-14, son of Mrs. William H. Capen of Newton. The ceremony, which will be followed by a reception, will take place at the home of Frederick J. Fawcett of 39 Hyde Park avenue, Newton. The bride-to-be is a niece of Mrs. Fawcett, also of the late William Vaughn Moody, the poet and dramatist. She is a great-niece to Gideon C. Moody, one of Dakota's pioneers, and was, during the latter years of his life, United States Senator from that State. Miss Schmalz's father is known for his metaphysical and scientific work.

Mr. Capen also comes of an old family. His father, William H. Capen, was one of the firm of Chandler & Company, and was an art collector of note. His grandfather was one of the founders of the Chandler firm and an uncle was the late Rev. Edward Capen, minister for many years of the Baptist Church in Watertown.

Miss Schmalz and Mr. Capen are both interested in social service. Mr. Capen has conducted classes among the Italians in New York City, where he is in business, and Miss Schmalz has this summer led the Wellesley figures for this year indicate that in this city, at least, 84 per cent of the traffic is motor driven, giving some idea of the enormous increase in the automobile business during the past three years.

THE TRAFFIC CENSUS

Tuesday was the day of heaviest travel at Nonantum square and Newtonville square, while Monday was the heaviest day at Washington street and Commonwealth avenue. At Nonantum square on Tuesday, between 7 A. M. and 7 P. M., 2566 motor vehicles and 555 horse driven vehicles were counted, an average of about 3 motor cars a minute. At Newtonville square the same period, there were 3265 motor and 303 horse driven vehicles, an average of over 4 machines a minute. The heaviest day at the third station showed a total of 2201 motors and 812 horse drawn vehicles, an average of about 3 cars a minute.

A grand total of 60,823 vehicles, not including trolley cars were counted, of which 7335 were during the night hours. Of this number, 51,075 were motor and 9,748 were horse driven. Of the motor vehicles, $322 were runabouts, 4564 were trucks and 38,179 were touring cars.

The 1912 traffic census did not include any Newton stations and it is necessary to go back to 1909 for a comparison. The motor driven traffic of the state at that time was about 38 per cent, as compared with 63 per cent in 1912. The Newton stations in 1909 were at Newtonville square and at Commonwealth avenue and Washington street. The August daily average at the latter station was 749 autos, and 374 horse, or 68 per cent automobile traffic, and in October, 647 auto and 299 horse, or 68 per cent auto traffic. At Newtonville square only the August figures are available, showing a daily average of 313 autos and 813 horse, or about 28 per cent auto traffic.

The department keeps a record of the daily temperature of the water in the pump well, and of the air outside, also of the height of water in the collecting gallery, the number of gallons pumped and consumed. The hours during which the pumping engines work are also noted, together with the amount of coal used.

The advent of the metropolitan district water system made its impression on our water works, and the Water Board in charge at that time decided that the best interests of the city demanded that Newton should be included within the district, but without taking the water until wanted. This decision has cost us $100,000.00 to date, as we have paid an annual assessment for the above so-called privilege. Possibly our descendants may live to reap the benefit of this act but it is costing the present water takers over $6,000 a year.

In this connection it is of interest to note that Cambridge, which did not enter the metropolitan water district when it was formed, is now considering the advisability of paying the metropolitan district the sum of one million dollars for the privilege of using metropolitan water.

We made one good trade, however, with the metropolitan water board in the sale in 1904 of the old open reservoir at Waban Hill which had proved inadequate for our purposes, $60,000 was paid for the reservoir which holds 14,500,000 gallons of water, and it is now used as a supply for Watertown and Belmont. In addition we made agreements with the metropolitan commissioners whereby we can draw on them for 15,000,000 gallons of water in cases of emergency, and have water furnished free in case of accidents to our own system. As a matter of fact this has not occurred, but Newton has assisted the metropolitan board in certain cases which have arisen. For these purposes, Newton and the metropolitan have connections on Ward street near the reservoir and at the Newton-Watertown line on Centre street. There are also connections with Boston, Brookline, and Waltham.

The possibility and probability of using water from the metropolitan supply is of considerable interest to many people, and it is pertinent to say in that connection that Newton is now paying about $20,000 yearly for the water we are consuming. The same amount of water furnished by the Metropolitan Water Commission would cost us at least $60,000 annually, beside the expense of the upkeep of the mains, services and other matters incidental to the distribution.

As a matter of economy, as well as the quality of the water, it is advisable for Newton to furnish its own supply as long as possible.

to pay annually a sum equal to 5 per cent on the estimated cost of laying a six inch main for the necessary distance, regardless of the amount of water consumed. This guarantee lasts for 5 years, and is credited with any subsequent services on that particular main. The usual main is six inches in diameter.

The system is divided into sections by over 900 stop gates, by which it is possible to make necessary repairs at a minimum of inconvenience to consumers.

Hydrants are located on all new mains at distances of about 500 feet apart and on old mains wherever requested by the Chief of Fire Department. There are 1050 hydrants in use at the present time.

In this connection it may be of interest to note that the fire service does not make so serious a draft upon the water supply as one might think. A large mill fire which occurred at night took about 475,000 gallons of water, the heaviest draft for a long period. This amount being readily determined from the height of the reservoir as indicated at City Hall.

The 300 dead ends on main pipes are more or less a nuisance to the department which makes a steady effort to eliminate them. The circulation of these dead ends occurs and is responsible for any complaint in the quality of the water. Constant efforts are made by regular flushings to keep them clean and complaints of this nature are promptly remedied.

The department keeps a record of the daily temperature of the water in the pump well, and of the air outside, also of the height of water in the collecting gallery, the number of gallons pumped and consumed. The hours during which the pumping engines work are also noted, together with the amount of coal used.

The advent of the metropolitan district water system made its impression on our water works, and the Water Board in charge at that time decided that the best interests of the city demanded that Newton should be included within the district, but without taking the water until wanted. This decision has cost us $100,000.00 to date, as we have paid an annual assessment for the above so-called privilege.

We made one good trade, however, with the metropolitan water board in the sale in 1904 of the old open reservoir at Waban Hill which had proved inadequate for our purposes, $60,000 was paid for the reservoir which holds 14,500,000 gallons of water, and it is now used as a supply for Watertown and Belmont. In addition we made agreements with the metropolitan commissioners whereby we can draw on them for 15,000,000 gallons of water in cases of emergency, and have water furnished free in case of accidents to our own system. As a matter of fact this has not occurred, but Newton has assisted the metropolitan board in certain cases which have arisen. For these purposes, Newton and the metropolitan have connections on Ward street near the reservoir and at the Newton-Watertown line on Centre street. There are also connections with Boston, Brookline, and Waltham.

The possibility and probability of using water from the metropolitan supply is of considerable interest to many people, and it is pertinent to say in that connection that Newton is now paying about $20,000 yearly for the water we are consuming. The same amount of water furnished by the Metropolitan Water Commission would cost us at least $60,000 annually, beside the expense of the upkeep of the mains, services and other matters incidental to the distribution.

As a matter of economy, as well as the quality of the water, it is advisable for Newton to furnish its own supply as long as possible.

HOW NEWTON IS GOVERNED

Part of a Series of Articles Explaining the Management of the City

The care of the poor and needy is one of the important duties of a municipality, a duty enjoined by civilization as well as Christian religion. It is not so large in its scope in a central city like Newton, as in manufacturing places and yet the to Newton taxpayers is nearly $70.82 a year.

The charity department in Newton is charge of an Overseer of the Poor appointed annually by the mayor and confirmed by the aldermen. A single headed method of administering the poor department was adopted about in 1905, and is a vast improvement over the former system of overseers with a secretary and almoner. The present plan concentrates responsibility, prevents imitation and saves expense.

The overseer is assisted in the office by one clerk, and at the "City Hall" as the almshouse is now called, warden and a matron. The public statutes require the overseer to relieve the immediate necessities of all applicants for aid. This evolved the custom that personal application must be made, the statement of a third party not being sufficient evidence of need, as the granting of such relief, pauperizes the recipient.

The granting of this relief, which usually takes the form of orders delivered by our own team from a city or at the almshouse, or on nearby farms in case of emergency for food, the overseer exercises judgment as to the worthiness of applicant and the amount of aid required. Rents are not paid by the department under any circumstances.

Settlement

After relief has been granted it is duty of the overseer to obtain the history of the applicant, in order to determine the legal settlement and whom the expenses shall be paid. History covers the name, age, place, condition, children, if any, and parents' name and residence. A legal settlement may be obtained in several ways, the more important being as follows:

Male, 21 years of age, by five years in one place, during which he has been paid for 3 years; an adult woman, by 5 years residence in one place—married women follow husband's settlement if any, otherwise own; legitimate children follow their settlement, if any, if not, they follow their mother's settlement, if illegitimate children follow their settlement at time of birth; any; and any person enlisted or engaged as part of the military quota in my city or town during the civil

From the history given by the applicant, and which has to be verified by consultation of directories, tax collectors books, and records of births, marriages and deaths, the overseer determines the settlement and if in another city or town in the state, he will notify within three months of time relief was granted. Such a town is then allowed 30 days in which to deny the settlement and

Roofing

It's no wonder, after fifty years of building up, we are anxious to do every kind of work.

Football practice for Newton High School will begin on Claffin Field, Monday, Sept. 13th at 3 o'clock.

Owing to the fact that practically all "N" men and substitutes graduated this Spring, Coach Dickinson hopes that a large squad will report fully equipped on that day.

Because of the large quantity of raw material and the hard schedule the team has to play any assistance that the alumni can give in the way of coaching will be greatly appreciated. Much individual coaching must be given for the team to keep the standard set by the teams of past years.

EDITORIAL

Representatives Allen and Weston who are candidates for renomination at the coming state primary on Sept.
21 should be returned without question by the Republicans of this city, as they have made a good record for first year men and can render the city and state even better service next year. The contest for the third nomination lies between Mr. Jarvis and the editor of the Graphic and efforts to induce persons to vote for both ought to be discouraged. Newton Republicans should make a choice between these two candidates and ought not to vote for both, to the exclusion of one or the other of the present representatives.

Attention is once more called to the change in the method of voting to be inaugurated at the state primary on Sept. 21st. The voter will not be obliged to ask for a party ballot, as party enrollment has been abolished. At the same time, care should be taken to vote for the candidates of but one party, as the primary is intended to settle party differences and is not an election. Voters marking their ballots for candidates of more than one party will throw away their vote as the ballot will be marked void.

The action of Charles Ward Post G.
A. R. endorsing the suggestion that military drill should be restored at the Newton High School will meet the hearty approval of many of our people and will receive considerable popular support. If the veterans will take upon themselves the responsibility of circulating petitions to the school committee, they will be doing a public service.

The figures announced this week from the Building department as to the building activities in this city indicate a tremendous increase in property values and certainly leads one to expect that the business depression of the past year is passing away.

The editor has received many favorable comments on the articles on the various phases of our city government which have been running in the GRAPHIC during the past two months.

A LARGE INCREASE

The records of the Building Commissioners office at City Hall show that there has been a tremendous increase in the building activities of this city during the six months ending June 30 of the present year.

For the same period ending June 30, 1914, there were permits for 197 frame buildings valued at $680,863, for 25 brick buildings valued at $21,600, and 113 alterations amounting to $113,662, making a grand total of $816,125 for the six months. For 1915, the figures show 277 permits for brick and frame buildings valued at $1,584,845 and 116 alterations amounting to $79,415, making a grand total of $1,664,260 or over double the values of the 1914 building operations.

Queer Fish.

Which fish have the power of floating and swimming back downward?

This peculiar property is possessed only by the diodon and the tetronot, two allied families of tropical fishes which are popularly known as globe-fish. The tetronot is also found off the coasts of Cornwall and Ireland. The faculty is due to the fact that the skin on the abdomen of these fishes is much looser than it is on the back, and they have the power to inflate this loose skin by swallowing air through the gullet. This course enables them to turn over at will, and, although the great French naturalist Cuvier did not believe that when in this position they could swim as they pleased, Durwin corrected him and proved that they could swim both forward and backward in this position.

It is of course well known that the shark and the dogfish owing to the peculiar position of the underjaw, are obliged to turn on their backs before they can seize their prey, and while in this position they are able to swim for a very considerable distance. This, however, is done by the muscular force of the fin and tail and not through any special apparatus, such as the globefish possesses. — St. James' Gazette.

The Cupboard Was Bare.

The late Dr. Masters, who was formerly a missionary in Canton, China, afterward lived in Berkeley, Cal. His friend and fellow missionary, Dr.
Boone, returning on furlough, was expected to arrive in San Francisco on a certain day. Dr. Masters crossed the bay to the city; he meant to meet Dr.
Boone and his party, and, after spending the day in sightseeing, to take them to dinner at a well known restaurant.

The steamer, however, had reached port earlier than had been expected, and when Dr. Masters got to the dock, his friends had left. He made inquiries at the principal hotels, but could not find them. In order to notify his family in Berkeley of the necessary change in plans, Dr. Masters sent them a telegram. Here is the somewhat damaged message that Dr.
Masters finally read:

"Can't find the bones. Will come home to dinner." — Youth's Companion.

FAVOR MILITARY DRILL

The following resolutions were adopted at the meeting of Charles Ward Post last Thursday.

WHEREAS The practice of military drill in High Schools is generally considered a very valuable exercise, promotive of discipline, accuracy and manliness, and WHEREAS

Such drill might, in our opinion, wisely and profitably take the place of some of the "sports" now consuming so much of the time and effort of our youth. Now therefore

RESOLVED

By Charles Ward Post, No. 62, Department of Mass. Grand Army of the Republic, that such Military Drill should now be resumed in the Newton High School, and we hereby respectfully request the School Committee of our city to take steps to that end at as early a day as practicable.

RESOLVED

That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the School Committee, to His Honor Mayor Childs and sent to each of the Newton papers for publication.

THIS luncheon is well balanced as to food values and is light and palatable.

Buttermilk Muffins.—Take two cups of flour, a tablespoonful of sugar, half a teaspoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of soda, a cupful of buttermilk and two tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Mix in the order given and beat thoroughly. Bake in a hot oven.

Use For Cold Fish.

Fish Omelet.—Take cold boiled white fish, four eggs, a little white sauce, a tablespoonful of milk or cream, an ounce and a half of butter and seasoning. Free the fish from all skin and bones, break into small flakes, melt a small piece of butter in a saucenpan, add the fish, with salt and pepper and enough white sauce to moisten the fish. Keep it hot. Slightly beat the eggs, add the milk and season to taste. Melt an ounce of butter in an omelet pan, pour in the eggs, stir over a hot fire till the mixture begins to set, then shake well. Shape it in oval form, put the prepared fish in the middle and fold in the ends.

Surprise Salad.—Take peelings from surprises of uniform size, scald and set on ice until cold. Scoop the inside from the tomatoes, leaving a thick shell. With half the pulp mix a few chopped walnuts and half as much chopped celery as you have pulp. Season with salt and pepper to taste and a little sugar. Return the tomato to the tomato shell and set on the ice to get cold before serving on crisp lettuce leaves with mayonnaise.

A Cold Dessert.

Orange and Nut Glace.—Put two cupfuls of sugar and one cupful of cold water in a saucenpan over the fire. Cook carefully until the syrup spins a thread. Beat the yolks of six eggs very light; pour the syrup upon them slowly, beating all the while. Return to the fire and cook for one minute. Strain into a bowl and beat until cold. Add a teaspoonful of vanilla, one-fourth of a cupful of orange juice and very finely chopped nuts if desired.

An Offender's First Arrest.

The first shock of arrest and imprisonment is to the first offender the great crisis of his life. He realizes suddenly and vividly that the state is not merely a political abstraction out of a long forgotten school book, but a thing alive, armed with jaw and claw. The effect of this is overwhelming. There lives no human animal more penitent and plastic than the first offender on his first day in prison. On that day of all days the state can mold him easily to its civic needs. Turn him over to a man who believes in the bottom good in him; teach him a trade whereby he may learn to support himself honestly when released; give him a share in his earnings, so that he may, even though in prison, support his innocent wife and helpless children or, if he is alone, save a bit of capital against that blackest day of liberation—in other words, give him work and hope, the two things which all men need in order to live—and you will have set him on the road to citizenship. Deprive him of work and hope and you will as surely set him on the road to criminality.—From "The Man in the Cage."

High Finance In China.

It is an established custom in China that a new company must pay dividends to its shareholders from the first years of its existence, and this forms invariably a clause of the articles of association. Some concerns which fail to realize a profit have to contract a high interest loan in order to pay dividends in full. It is this practice that compels companies to contract loan after loan until they are plunged into a helpless state. Furthermore, when a new company is established it is from the start tied down to a system of commission paying. In every purchase as well as in every sale of the company a commission goes with it, which is therefore counted into every payment and receipt, thus occasioning the need of an unnecessarily large amount of capital.—Argonaut.

Difficult Trading.

The trade between India and Tibet has to be carried through lofty passes between 14,000 and 18,000 feet high, most of which are practically impassable during seasons of heavy rain and snow. Sheep and also crosses between yaks and ordinary cattle are used as beasts of burden. The most important route into Tibet from India is from Sikkim, near Darjeeling in northern Bengal, and across the small frontier state of Sikkim to Gyantse and Yatung in Tibet, the two leading trade marts authorized by the existing convention. The other chief means of access to Tibet are from Almora, in the northern part of the united provinces, and from Simla over the Simla-Tibet border lakes, Maine.

The Rev. Andrew W. Archibald, D. D., of Newton Centre has previously appeared in the field of literature with three books, and now he has written his fourth, "Biblical Nature Studies," which has been published by the Pilgrim Press of Boston.

P. Bradford, 155 Lake avenue. The girls have made baskets and a variety of fancy articles, which will be on sale, along with cake and ice cream.

CAMP PASSACONAWAY

On September 1st Camp Passaconaway finished its fourth and most successful season.

Mrs. Frederick S. Pratt of West Newton presented a silver cup to the camp, on which is to be engraved each year the name of the boy showing the best camp spirit. The cup will be retained this year by Stanley H. Lyon, Roger Salinger, Belden Sly and Robert Hopkins received honorable mention in this contest.

The tennis shield was won by Belden Sly, with Frederick Pratt runner up; the track shield was won by George Owen, with Stanley Lyon a close second; Wallace Richmond easily won the swimming shield.

The baseball team, in contests with boys of their own age, won every series of games.

Under the direction of Mr. Robert J. Sisk, interesting entertainments were given Saturday evening. The most successful of these affairs were a minstrel show and a seven act play. The boys took part in a tennis tournament given by Camp Tecumseh for the championship of the White Mountains. The Junior cup for the camp winning the greatest number of points was won by Camp Passaconaway.

Interesting and instructive talks were given the boys by Mr. James Swan, of the N. E. Shipbuilding Co., Mr. George Owen, expert yacht designer, Mr. Wm. Laud and Mr. Richmond.

Each Monday and Thursday evening was devoted to Scout work.

Those enrolled were Frank A. Shute, John W. Bryant, Wm. G. Harlan, Sisk, Belden Sly, Robert Reno, Roger Salinger, James Edward Swan, I. Kent Keith, Thomas Marshall, Stanley H. Lyon, Hartman C. Reno, Robert Salinger, Henry Waitt, George Owen, Jr., Robert H. Hopkins, Wallace E. Richmond, Jr., George K. Brush, Read Colgan, George E. Carr, Wm. Flye, Rupert Thompson, Frederick S. Pratt, Roscoe H. Fuller, Stanley Kimball, and Richard D. Hall.

Speed of Animals.

It is believed that no animal has ever exceeded the speed which can be attained by the horse. Instantaneous photographs of one famous specimen showed the full length of a complete stride to be about twenty-six feet.

The hare has not, in reality, the speed of the dog. The dog, on the other hand, does not attain the speed of the horse.

The giraffe is said to run at the rate of fifteen yards per second under the most favorable conditions.

The elephant, going at the rate of two yards a second, carried a weight approximating to that carried by six horses—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

An Impression of Gorky.

"Once when I was singing in Nijni rarely in the morning," said Chaliapin, Russia's greatest singer, "I looked out and saw Gorky standing at a window in the same notes, and gazing silently over the city. The sun was shining on the towers of the churches, over the silver river, and turning the roofs red. 'You are up early,' I said. 'Yes,' he answered, 'Come in my room for a moment. When I read in his window I saw that he had tears in his eyes, and I did not understand. 'Look,' he said to me, 'how beautiful it is. Just the world and not a human being anywhere. The humanity which has made its gods and its laws, built its houses and its churches, all asleep and helpless as children, powerless to change or adjust all this that it has made.'

"He spoke very softly and very sweetly, dad; for the moment, he seemed to me the most perfect human being in the world. 'Bring one of Russia's flowers of genius,'—Craftsmen

The Sleepy Egyptian.

Egyptians can lie down and go to sleep anywhere. They look around until they find a particularly busy place in the street where there is a patch of shade, wrap a dusty cloth around them, curl up and peacefully glide off into a dreamless sleep. In walking along the street one has to be careful of every splotch of shadow that he comes to for fear of stepping on a native's face. Even when you do step on this usually sensitive part of the anatomy they merely sit up, yawn thankfully that you are a medium sized man and lazily turn over on the other side. As soon as an Egyptian finds out that a person is an American his first breathless question is, "Will there be many Americans coming over this winter?" High and low, merchants and donkey boys, they ask the same question, for half of Egypt lives on the tourists, and the greatest number of these are from the United States. —Homer Croy in Leslie's

A Matter of Distances.

Why did Homer call the Dardanelles "broad" or "boundless," although at the point where Leander and Bernon swam it the breadth is barely a mile? Byron's comment is very neat: "The wrangling about the epithet, 'the broad Hellespont,' or the 'boundless Hellespont,' whether it means one or the other, or what it means at all, has been beyond all possibility of detail. I have even heard it disputed on the spot and not foreseeing a speedy conclusion to the controversy, amused myself with swimming across it in the meantime and probably may again before the point is settled." * * * Probably Homer had the same notion of distance that a coquette has of time, and when he talks of boundless means half a mile, as the latter, by a like figure, when she says eternal attachment simply specifies three weeks!"—London Spectator

The Victoria Cross.

The recipient of the Victoria cross is "V. C." and nobody sees anything strange in that. It is curious to recall the difficulties Queen Victoria felt upon the point when the V. C. was instituted. "The queen thinks," she wrote to Lord Palmerston, "that the persons decorated with the Victoria cross might very properly be allowed to bear some distinctive mark after their name." * * * V. C. would not do. K. G. means a Knight of the Garter, C. B. a Companion of the Bath, M. P. a Member of Parliament, M. D. a doctor of medicine, etc., in all cases designating a person. No one could be either a Victoria cross V. C., moreover, means a knight errant at present. D. V. C. (decorated with the Victoria cross) or B. V. C. (bearer of the Victoria cross) might do. The queen thinks the last the best."—London Mirror.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

Griffith's big picture "The Birth of a Nation" will come to the Scenic Theatre, Waltham, next Monday, September 13th for 3 days (mat. and eve.). There will be a big orchestra of 16 pieces, and a chorus behind the scenes, while several very beautiful girls will act as ushers, to furnish local color.

The picture is a dramatization of Dixon's "The Clansman." Its chief incidents are historic. The incident of the negro is responsible for the formation of the Ku-Klux Klan which chases the carpet-baggers out of the South and rehabilitates the Southland. Few people know into what a lamentable situation the South fell nearly ten years after Appomattox. The whites were disfranchised because of their part in the war and Southern States were governed by a combination of newly franchised negroes and carpet-baggers from the North whose main object was loot. How the whites of the South regained control of the country is one of the most dramatic passages in our history. "The Birth of a Nation" is said to contain 18,000 people and 3000 horses. Nothing so spectacular has yet been shown upon the screen. For the first time in the history of film art you see the great historical conflict pass before you. The Burning of Atlanta, Sherman's March to the Sea, Victory of the North, Grant and Lee at Appomattox, Reconstruction Troubles, Love and Romance of History, Tremendous battle scenes, The Lincoln Tragedy, Dauntless rides of the Ku-Klux Klan, tender domestic drama and charming comedy to the dawn of the "New Nation." Owing to the tremendous patronage that will undoubtedly be showered upon this massive screen spectacle during its local engagement, patrons are warned to secure their seat reservations at the earliest possible moment for the attendants at the Scenic Theater will positively be greater than Waltham has ever known before, either for a production of the spoken stage or the silent drama.

WILBUR THEATRE

"Nobody Home," the most unique and fascinating musical comedy Boston has ever had, continues to draw capacity crowds to Ye Wilbur Theatre, where it will enter upon its fourth successful week next Monday evening, September 13th. In the history of the theatre this city has never had a musical comedy captivate playgoers to the extent that "Nobody Home" has succeeded in doing. Every place one hears the syncopating melodies of "The Magic Melody," "Any Old Night," "The San Francisco Fair," "Bed, Beautiful Bed," "Why Take a Sandwich to a Banquet," and "The Charlie Chaplin Walk." The town has gone "Nobody Home" mad. Quentin Tod and his dancing partner, Helen Clarke, give an artistic exhibition of the very newest and smartest thing in modern dancing. They are one of the important features of the production. A chorus of the prettiest of pretty girls help with the fun-making which lasts for three hours of laughter and enjoyment.

MAJESTIC THEATRE—Boston and New England simply would not allow to leave Boston D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle "The Birth of a Nation," which was seen for 22 weeks at the Tremont Theatre by nearly half the population of Boston, and the past week at the Majestic, making its 23rd big week in Boston. The 24th week begins next Monday, September 13. So insatiable has been the desire of the theatre-going population of New England to see more of this marvelous $500,000 production, and so forcible and overwhelming the demand for a longer stay of it in this city that arrangements had to be made for another theatre as its Boston home. And so the Majestic Theatre becomes the fortunate possessor of "The Birth of a Nation" as an attraction for a limited additional stay in Boston. The 24th week of the continuation of the Boston run at the Majestic Theatre will begin next Monday afternoon, with performances given twice daily, every afternoon at 2:10 and every evening at 8:10. Seats are now selling for next week.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE

"He Fell in Love with His Wife," a dramatization of E. P. Roe's famous novel, will be the second bill of the season presented next week by the Craig Players at the Castle Square Theatre. This play is a powerful rural drama with a real heart interest. The cast will contain Mary Young, John Craig and all the old favorites of last season.

The Exploits of Elaine

A Detective Novel and a Motion Picture Drama

By ARTHUR B. REEVE
The Well-Known Novelist and the Creator of the "Craig Kennedy" Stories

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company All Foreign Rights Reserved

SYNOPSIS.

The New York police are mystified by a series of murders and other crimes. The principal clue to the criminal is the warning letter which he left for the victims, signed with the clutching hand. The latest victim of the mysterious assassin is Taylor Dodge, the insurance president. His daughter, Elaine, employs Craig Kennedy, the scientific detective, to try to unravel the mystery. What Kennedy accomplishes is told by his friend Jameson, a newspaper man. Enraged at the determined effort which Elaine and Craig Kennedy are making to put an end to the crimes, the Clutching Hand, who is this strange criminal, known, resorts to all sorts of the most diabolical schemes to put them out of the way. Each chapter of the story is told in such a way that their lives and of the way the great detective uses all his skill to save this pretty girl and himself from death.

TENTH EPISODE

THE LIFE CURRENT.

Assignments were being given out on the Star one afternoon, and I was standing talking with several other reporters, in the busy hum of typewriters and clicking telegraphs.

"What do you think of that?" asked one of the fellows. "You're something of a scientific detective, aren't you?"

Without laying claim to such a distinction, I took the paper and read:

THE POISONED KISS AGAIN.

Three More New York Women Report Being Kissed by Mysterious Stranger—Later Fell Into Deep Unconsciousness—What Is It?

I had scarcely finished when one of the copy boys, dashing past me, called out: "You're wanted on the wire, Mr. Jameson."

I hurried over to the telephone and answered.

A musical voice responded to my hurried hello, and I hastened to adopt my most polite tone.

"Is this Mr. Jameson?" asked the voice.

"Yes," I replied, not recognizing it.

"Well, Mr. Jameson, I've heard of you on the Star, and I've just had a very strange experience. I've had the poisoned kiss."

The woman did not pause to catch my exclamation of astonishment, but went on: "It was like this. A man ran up to me on the street and kissed me—and I don't know how it was—but I became unconscious—and I didn't come to for an hour—in a hospital—fortunately. I don't know what would have happened if it hadn't been that someone came to my assistance and the man fled. I thought the Star would be interested."

"We are," I hastened to reply. "Will you give me your name?"

"Why, I am Mrs. Florence Leigh of No. 20 Prospect avenue," returned the voice.

"Say," I exclaimed hurrying over to the editor's desk, "here's another woman on the wire who says she has received the poisoned kiss."

"Suppose you take that assignment," the editor answered, sensing a possible story.

I took it with alacrity, figuring out the quickest way by elevated and surface to reach the address.

I must say that I could scarcely criticize the poisoned kiss's taste, for the woman who opened the door certainly was extraordinarily attractive.

"And you really were—put out by a kiss?" I queried, as she led me into a neat sitting room.

"Absolutely—as much as if it had been by one of these poisoned needles you read about," she replied confidently, hastening on to describe the affair vaguely.

It was beyond me.

"May I use your telephone?" I asked.

"Surely," she answered.

I called the laboratory. "Is that you, Craig?" I inquired.

"Yes, Walter," he answered, recognizing my voice.

My only answer was an uproarious laugh from him at the idea.

"I know," I persisted, "but I've got the assignment from the Star—and I'm out here interviewing a woman about it. It's all right to laugh—but here I am. I've found a case—names, dates and places. I wish you'd explain the thing, then."

"Oh, all right, Walter," he replied indulgently. "I'll meet you as soon as I can and help you out."

We waited patiently.

The bell rang and the woman hastened to the door, admitting Kennedy.

"Hello, Walter," he greeted.

"This is certainly a most remarkable case, Craig," I said, introducing him, and telling briefly what I had learned.

"And you actually mean to say that a kiss had the effect?"

Just then the telephone interrupted.

"Yes," she reassured quickly. "Excuse me second."

She answered the call. "Oh—why yes, he's here. Do you want to speak to him? Mr. Jameson, it's the Star."

"Confound it!" I exclaimed. "Isn't that like the old man—dragging me off this story before it's half finished in order to get another. I'll have to go. I'll get this story from you, Craig."

The day before, in the suburban house, the Clutching Hand had been talking to two of his emissaries, an attractive young woman and a man.

They were Flirty Florrie and Dan the Dude.

"Now, I want you to get Kennedy," he said. "The way to do it is to separate Kennedy and Elaine—see?"

"All right, Chief, we'll do it." They replied.

Clutching Hand had scarcely left when Flirty Florrie began by getting published in the papers the story which I had seen.

The next day she called me up from the suburban house. Having got me to promise to see her, she had scarcely turned from the telephone when Dan the Dude walked in from the next room.

"He's coming," she said.

Dan was carrying a huge stag head with a beautifully branched pair of antlers. Under his arm was a coil of wire which he had connected to the inside of the head.

"Flite!" he exclaimed. Then, pointing to the head, he added, "It's all ready. See how I fixed it? That ought to please the Chief."

Dan moved quickly to the mantel and mounted a stepladder there by which he had taken down the head, and started to replace the head above the mantel.

He hooked the head on a nail.

"There," he said, unscrewing one of the beautiful brown glass eyes of the stag.

Back of it could be seen a camera shutter.

"One of those new quick shutter cameras," he explained.

Then he ran a couple of wires along the molding around the room and into a closet, where he made the connection with a sort of switchboard on which a button was marked, "SHUTTER" and the switch, "WIND FILM."

"Now, Flirty," he said, coming out of the closet and pulling up the shade which let a flood of sunlight into the room, "you see, I want you to stand here—then, do your little trick."

Just then the bell rang.

"That must be Jameson," she cried. "Now—get to your corner."

With a last look Dan went into the closet and shut the door.

Perhaps half an hour later Clutching Hand himself called me up on the telephone. It was he—not the Star—as I learned only too late.

• • • • •

I had scarcely got out of the house, as Craig told me afterwards, when Flirty Florrie told all over again the embroidered tale that had caught my ear.

Kennedy said nothing, but listened intently, perhaps betraying in his face the skepticism he felt.

"You see," she said, still voluble and eager to convince him, "I was only walking on the street. Here—let me show you. It was just like this."

She took his arm and, before he knew it, led him to the spot on the floor near the window which Dan had indicated. Meanwhile Dan was listening attentively in his closet.

"Now—stand there. You are just as I was—only I didn't expect anything."

She was pantomiming some one approaching stealthily while Kennedy watched her with interest, tinged with doubt. Behind Craig in his closet, Dan was reaching for the switchboard button.

It was beyond me.

"May I use your telephone?" I asked.

"Surely," she answered.

I called the laboratory. "Is that you, Craig?" I inquired.

"Yes, Walter," he answered, recognizing my voice.

My only answer was an uproarious laugh from him at the idea.

"I know," I persisted, "but I've got the assignment from the Star—and I'm out here interviewing a woman about it. It's all right to laugh—but here I am. I've found a case—names, dates and places. I wish you'd explain the thing, then."

"Oh, all right, Walter," he replied indulgently. "I'll meet you as soon as I can and help you out."

We waited patiently.

The bell rang and the woman hastened to the door, admitting Kennedy.

"Hello, Walter," he greeted.

"This is certainly a most remarkable case, Craig," I said, introducing him, and telling briefly what I had learned.

"And you actually mean to say that a kiss had the effect?"

Just then the telephone interrupted.

"Yes," she reassured quickly. "Excuse me second."

yes, he's here. Do you want to speak to him? Mr. Jameson, it's the Star."

Elaine moved into the drawing room, Jennings springing forward to part the portieres for her and passing through the room quickly where Flirty Florrie sat waiting. Flirty Florrie rose and stood gazing at Elaine, apparently very much embarrassed, even after Jennings had gone.

"It is embarrassing," she said finally, "but, Miss Dodge, I have come to you to beg for my love."

Elaine looked at her nonplussed.

"Yes," she continued, "you do not know it, but Craig Kennedy is infatuated with you. She paused again, then added, "But he is engaged to me."

Elaine stared at the woman. She was dazed. She could not believe it.

"There's the ring," Flirty Florrie added, indicating a very impressive paste diamond.

Quickly she reached into her bag and drew out two photographs, without a word, handing them to Elaine.

"There's the proof," Flirty Florrie said simply, choking a sob.

Elaine looked with a start. Sure enough, there was the neat living room in the house on Prospect avenue. In one picture Florrie had her arms over Kennedy's shoulders. In the other, apparently, they were passionately kissing.

Elaine slowly laid the photographs on the table.

"Please—please, Miss Dodge—give me back my lost love. You are rich and beautiful—I am poor. I have only good looks. But—I—I love him—and he—loves me—and has promised to marry me."

Flirty had broken down completely and was weeping softly into a lace handkerchief.

She moved toward the door. Elaine followed her.

"Jennings—please see the lady to the door."

Back in the drawing-room, Elaine seized the photographs and hurried into the library where she could be alone.

Just then she heard the bell and Kennedy's voice in the hall.

"How are you this afternoon," Kennedy greeted Elaine gayly.

Elaine had been too overcome by what had just happened to throw it off so easily, and received him with studied coolness.

"Hey, you fellows—what are you doing there?" he shouted.

Craig paused a second, then pulled his card from his pocket.

"Just the man I want," he purred, much to the policeman's surprise.

"There's something crooked going on here. Follow us in."

We climbed into the window. There was the same living room we had seen the day before. But it was now bare and deserted.

"Come on," cried Kennedy, beckoning us on.

Quickly he rushed through the house. There was not a thing in it to change the deserted appearance of the first floor. At last it occurred to Craig to grope his way down cellar. There was nothing there.

Kennedy had been carefully going over the place, and was at the other side of the cellar from ourselves when I saw him stop and gaze at the floor.

"Hide," he whispered suddenly to us.

No answer. But the rope still moved. Perhaps the helmet made it impossible for him to hear.

He had struggled back in the swirling current almost exhausted by his helpless burden. Holding Elaine's head above the surface of the water and pulling on the rope to attract my attention, he could neither hear nor shout. He had taken a turn of the rope about Elaine. I tried pulling on it. There was something heavy on the other end, and I kept on pulling.

At last I could make out Kennedy dimly mounting the ladder. The weight was the unconscious body of Elaine which he steadied as he mounted the ladder. I tugged harder and he slowly came up.

Together, at last, the policeman and I reached down and pulled him out.

We placed Elaine on the cellar floor, as comfortably as was possible, and the policeman began his first aid motions for resuscitation.

"No—no!" cried Kennedy. "Not here—take her up where the air is fresher."

With his revolver still drawn to overawe the prisoner, the policeman forced him to aid us in carrying her up the rickety flight of cellar steps. Kennedy followed quickly, unscrewing the oxygen helmet as he went.

In the deserted living room we deposited our senseless burden, while Kennedy, the helmet off now, bent over her.

"Quick—quick!" he cried to the officer. "An ambulance!"

"But the prisoner," the policeman indicated.

"Hurry—hurry; I'll take care of him," urged Craig, seizing the policeman's pistol and thrusting it into his pocket. "Walter, help me."

He was trying the ordinary methods of resuscitation. Meanwhile the officer had hurried out, seeking the nearest telephone, while we worked madly to bring Elaine back.

Again and again Kennedy bent and outstretched her arms, trying to induce respiration again. So busy was I that for the moment I forgot our prisoner.

But Dan had seen his chance.

Noisily he picked up the old chair in the room and with it raised was approaching Kennedy to knock him out.

Before I knew it myself Kennedy had heard him. With a half instinctive motion he drew the revolver from his pocket and, almost before I could see it, had shot the man. Without a word he returned the gun to his pocket and again bent over Elaine, without so much as a look at the crook, who sank to the floor, dropping the chair from his nerveless hands.

Already the policeman had got an ambulance, which was now tearing along to us.

Franctically Kennedy was working.

Chicago Pastor Sees in Their New Democracy the Safety from Anarchy

The entry of women into politics is proving the strongest factor in bringing about a new democracy in America, the Rev. Dr. W. C. Covert, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Chicago, said in a sermon at the Brick Presbyterian Church in New York last week, and it is this new democracy alone that can save the country from anarchy. Dr. Covert said the new democracy included social justice as its principal feature, and that Chicago was the city which was taking the lead in these matters, and other cities, outside of New York, were far behind.

HUGO'S REPORT HITS ARGUMENT

"Bad Woman's Vote" No Menace Says Empire State Figures by 18 to 7 and 14 to 1

Secretary of State Hugo's Report on Criminal Statistics in New York has delivered another blow at the menace of the so-called "bad woman vote" which troubles the minds of many men. His figures show that not only were there fourteen convictions against men to one against women in the courts of the Empire State last year, but that relatively men are getting worse and women better, if criminal statistics are any gauge. The convictions against men in 1914 were over 18 per cent. more than they were in 1913, while the gain for women was only 7 per cent.

"Woman suffrage is unqualifiedly a success. State prohibition was won as a direct result," says Mrs. Solon Sheed, president of the Washington State Federation of Women's Clubs.

The Suffrage Victory parade that will be held in Boston on Saturday Oct. 16th is to be one of the largest parades Boston ever saw. There will be a representation from every city and town in Massachusetts.

It is pleasant to observe that through all the changes of the ages, even in the midst of sporadic suffrage, the home, and the family, and marriage have powerfully survived.—Edna Kenton.

The effect of woman suffrage in the States which have adopted it has been grossly and maliciously misrepresented by the liquor interests. For myself I would be for woman suffrage, if for no other reason, because of the enemies it has made.—U. S. Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma.

It is said that women have no experience in electoral matters. When a boy becomes 21 he has had no experience, yet he is admitted at one to the suffrage.—Chief Justice Clark of North Carolina.

If the final analysis, the burden of war falls on the women. They carry the cross, and it is only just that they have some voice in the government which declares a war in which they suffer.—Irvin Cobb.

NORUMBEGA PARK

Thousands of patrons took advantage of the beautiful weather during the holiday to visit this magnificent resort at Auburndale on the Charles. Never has the Park appeared more beautiful than now with the shrubs and flowers in the height of late summer glory. A big holiday show is the attraction in the famous theatre this week. "Too Many Darlings" a big laughing show receives an ovation at every performance. The song numbers are especially good and the dancing of the principals and chorus deserves much commendation. Every evening in addition to the regular performance, a feature photo play is presented that pleases. Next Sunday night the concert program includes the famous actress Hazel Dawn in the photoplay "Niobe." Next week will be Norumbega's big Motion Picture Week. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evening, the great comedian Nat Goodwin will be presented in the latest Photo Play "Business is Business." This is the first time Mr. Goodwin has appeared in "Movies" and is sure to be a tremendous success. Beginning Thursday and for the balance of the week the popular comedian Marie Tempest can be seen in the Photo Play "Mrs. Plum's Pudding."

FAMOUS BUSINESS SCHOOL

Opened September 7

With the largest enrollment in its history, the Bryant & Stratton Commercial School began its year's work Tuesday, September 7. The success of this school, which is one of the best known in the United States, is a striking testimony to the value of efficient methods in business training. In this particular case the training is especially adapted to its needs, in fact it was constructed especially for the school with every needed facility, excellent light, from 16 to 20 wide windows and plenty of fresh air. It is located in the most convenient section of the city, between Arlington, Bayston and Providence Streets.

The Bryant & Stratton teaching plan is the individual system, based on the particular requirements of each pupil. Actual practice is combined with study. The different courses fit students not only for general business but for secretarial and stenographic positions, civil service examinations, bookkeeping and training of commercial managers and schools. Graduates from this school are always in demand in the business world. The school sessions only, from 9 to 2, with no classes on Saturdays or evenings. A tribute to the high standing of the school is the fact that no patronage comes unsolicited—no canvassing of other methods—in common practice in business "colleges"—being used to obtain pupils.

We have again seen of how little value are the endorsements of woman suffrage by politicians from woman suffrage states. The recent Governor's convention in Boston was attended by Governors from several of these states. The Boston suffragists seized this opportunity, engaged Faneuil Hall for a rally, and invited these Governors to tell benighted Massachusetts of the glories of double suffrage. The Rally was widely advertised as "Governors' Night." When the night came, lone governor (Gov. Alexander of Idaho) was on hand to speak. The others had gone to a clam bake!

These poor Governors are sometimes obliged by the necessity of placating the women politicians to speak in favor of woman suffrage in their own states. But when it is a question of helping the Boston Suffragists to fasten the system on Massachusetts, they show how much real belief in it they have by staying away from the meetings at which they are advertised to speak, to enjoy a clam bake.

In the splendid fight being waged by Elihu Root in the New York Constitutional Convention for the people against the bosses, he has the strong support of Henry Stimson, formerly Secretary of War and George Wickerham, Ex-United States Attorney General. All three of these men are ardent anti-suffragists, strongly opposed to forcing political and jury duties upon the women of the country because a noisy few demand it. The bosses want suffrage. A Tammany official invited to speak at the suffrage shop in New York told his audience that he wanted woman suffrage even though it did harm. The New York Commercial says that experience shows that in our large cities the female vote is more easily manipulated than the male. The bosses are learning this fact.

The suffragists tell us what the vote will give us. Ask them what it will take from us? Is it a gain to have to work through a party machine? Is it an advantage to have to gain your object by political compromise and strategic juggling? Look at the results attained by women in the last fifty years. Is not the whole country profiting by the fact that we can go straight to the Governor, to the Mayor, to whom we will, and know that he will give us respectful attention whatever the party in control, for we alone have no political ties. We are the one mighty body working solely for the public good, regardless of party bonds. And in the face of all this, and all we are now accomplishing, are we to be robbed, beyond possibility or recovery, of all that sets us above boss and above party?

The suffragists have always been linked with the most extreme believers in Socialism—those who believe that the home, the private family and the duties of husbands toward wives are hindrances to their "freedom." Along with this, they have put into their own official history as unmistakable evidences of their anti-religious sentiments as any Socialist has ever framed into language.

One of the first resolutions adopted by them in 1848 was against the so-called "monopoly of the pulpit" by men—a claim all the more significant when we remember that only two weeks ago, Rev. Olympia Brown, a suffragist preacher, said in San Francisco that men were no longer fit to preach. But the Rev. Brown was introducing nothing original—for in its chapter on "Woman, Church and State," the official history of woman suffrage declares:

"Our government and religion are alike essentially masculine in their origin and development. All the evils that have resulted from dignifying one sex and degrading the other may be traced to this central error; a belief in a trinity of masculine gods in one, from which the feminine element is wholly excluded."

No city with less than 450,000 inhabitants has so many women divorced as Denver, where one woman to every 29 who are married is a divorcee. The average is 1 divorce to 113 married women throughout the Union.

Denver, which leads the whole country in divorce in proportion to population, where women have voted for 23 years, recently broke its own record with 54 applications for divorce in a single afternoon.

In an article entitled "The Free Women of the North," by Mabel Potter Daggett, in the Pictorial Review, for September, 1915, we are told of the wonderful advances of women in Scandinavian countries, owing to the fact that they have the vote. She says here in America we have thought we had comparatively easy divorce, but in America to obtain a divorce, there must be "grounds," which means that one party or the other to the marriage must be guilty of wrong to the other, but in Scandinavia the law does not require husband and wife to wait until one has wronged the other. They may secure a divorce for the asking. It doesn't cost anything. There is not even a lawyer needed. The process is simple; one notifies a magistrate that you are separating. You are not required to go into details. You simply state that you no longer wish to continue the marriage. Then one party to the contract goes away for a year—in Finland it is for only three months—at the end of that period the magistrate hands you the papers that dissolve the marriage as quietly as it was made.

But even this amount of freedom does not satisfy the voting Scandinavian woman. Scandinavian has originated the "conscience marriage" which is without any legal tie. It is simply an announcement in the newspapers that this man and this woman take each other for husband and wife. Either, of course, is free to leave the other at any time. This marital freedom, Miss Daggett tells us, has come through economic freedom. With the revision of the marriage relation, all

Mothers' Aid

On September 1st, 1913, the State Legislature passed a law known as Mothers' Aid. This law has been in effect very nearly two years, the results of which have been very gratifying, not only in this City, but all over the entire Commonwealth. Of course, there are restrictions guarding this act, which enables many Overseers of the Poor to place each and every case that comes to their attention under the proper class. In some cases, the husband or father, is probably physically incapacitated to perform manual labor. If there are children under fourteen, this is, in the opinion of the State Board of Charity, a case worthy of aid under Chapter 763, Acts of 1913. Before any assistance is rendered, a complete history is taken and submitted personally to the Supervisor of this aid. Of course, there is nothing to prevent the Overseer from administering relief while the case is before the State Board, if in his or her opinion the aid is needed immediately. The good that this law has done in the past can be plainly seen by going into some of the homes where this relief is received. A woman with one child under fourteen is generally not eligible, it being the belief of the State that she should be able to get along without public assistance. If a woman who has only one child is physically unable to do work, then she can be classed as a Mothers' Aid case. There have been quite a few applications under this law, and some, on account of property conditions have been refused. Many recipients of this aid would never have applied for it if the law had not been passed. If their case is refused, then they want the Temporary Aid, which does pauperize part of the basement was constructed for the City Store, said store being established in 1912. By means of this store, we are able to buy goods at wholesale and deliver them to the needy at pretty nearly the same price. Many of the store keepers objected to this method for this reason. Some of the poor contracted bills for supplies and being unable to meet them by the payment of cash, endeavored to settle accounts in the following manner. An order on the store was given for two or three dollars. In some instances the full amount of the order was not received, therefore, the balance could be placed to their credit, and in such a way they were able in a long run to strike out the old bill. Another case was brought to light, where a store keeper gave a box of cigars, such as they were, in payment of ten cents and the city order.

The City Home is at the present time having dormer windows put in so that in the event of overcrowding, we shall be able to finish off the third floor either as a dormitory or have private rooms.

Sick Poor

All cases admitted to the hospital must be approved by the City Physician except emergencies. The local physicians must consult Dr. Lowe, prior to their admission of patients. In some cases, the physicians have not done this, and the case has not been accepted. Every case admitted to the hospital is investigated, and if settled in another City that City is immediately notified. In some cases efforts are made to collect for the hospital bill, if the family is able to pay something, if not all. Other cities and towns are beginning to charge this City the amount that we charge them. With some places, as for instance the City of Boston, an agreement was made to charge the flat rate of ten dollars per week, therefore, we stand to lose six dollars and fifty-two cents on every Boston case. This agreement was made for this reason, Boston will probably have ten of our cases in their hospital to one of the in the Newton Hospital. If we charge them sixteen dollars and fifty-two cents for their case, they, in turn, can charge us the same, as their institution is owned and supported by the City. It has been noted that some of the other cities are doing the same thing charging us sixteen dollars and fifty-two cents because we billed them at that rate.

On every State case this City loses nine dollars and fifty-two cents as we are only able to collect seven dollars per week from the Commonwealth. Before the hospital contract was made we were charged by the hospital only seven dollars per week on State cases, but since 1911 we are charged the full rate regardless of the age or settlement of the patient. All State cases when in need of hospital treatment are, except in cases of emergency, sent to the State Infirmary at Tewksbury.

The city also renders the last service to the dead by burying paupers and unknown persons in the city lot at the Newton cemetery. This also entails upon the overseer the duty of finding a possible settlement and the sending of bills. J. C. Brimblecom.

CHANGING STANDARDS OF GASOLINE

Low Boiling Point the Real Test of Quality, not High Gravity

No person, except in emergency cases, chargeable to the city can be admitted to the Newton Hospital except on certificate of the city physician. Cost per patient $16.52 per week.

This officer, who is a vital part of the department, saves the city many dollars in the course of the year in his work among the sick poor.

Insane

Up to 1904 the expense of the insane in the various state institutions was paid by the city in a similar manner as it pays other cities and towns for aid rendered persons, settled in their city. At that time the entire control of the insane was assumed by the state. Our appropriation for insane averaged $9000 a year prior to this change, while our share of the state tax for cost of insane this year is above $20,000. An interesting story can be written on this subject.

Office

The department's headquarters at City Hall are full of interesting records and books. Over 5000 indexed histories, Boston directories since 1840 and the entire edition of Newton directories, cover the walls. The records and histories of course are strictly private, and many an interesting story might be written from these short and simple annals of the poor.

While constant efforts are made by the department to place the persons who apply for aid, upon a self supporting basis, there are always chronic cases of pauperism, which are a dead weight upon the strongest efforts.

In some cases, three generations of one family are inmates of the almshouse, and it is evident that heredity plays some part in the life dramas of these people.

The agent visits all paupers at least 3 times a year and also acts as the Probation Visitor to paroled prisoners, for the State Board of Charities.

In conclusion I can personally testify to the good work being done by this very necessary department of the city, and desire to call attention to one or two important facts. In the first place the department is not limited by the municipal appropriation and all expenses incurred by the overseer in his statutory duties must be paid by the city.

The second fact is that the amount of money recovered by the city for outside settlements depends upon the vigilance and activity of the officers of this department.

The increased cost of our poor is due largely to the lack of employment, and also the increased cost of the necessities of life. At the City Home, a special privilege for women, she tells us, are being abolished. This is the road on which suffrage and feminism are traveling.

Beatrice Forbes Robertson, one of the most popular speakers for suffrage, thinks that marriages should be "more easily terminated" than at present. She says: "My own view is that divorce without detriment to the standing of either party is the solution towards which we are drawing, and I find that view shared by the great mass of Feminists with whose words and writings I have come in contact."

HOW NEWTON IS GOVERNED

enth of a Series of Articles Explaining the Management of the City

While all of our city departments that its own particular field is of the utmost importance to the welfare of the city, I presume every one will admit that the Street Department, with its multifarious duties, stands very near, if, indeed, it does not occupy the first place. Every one makes use of the sidewalks and streets of our beautiful city, and every one, particularly the portion of the community, firmly believe that they could do the work necessary to keep the streets in good condition far better than the Street Commissioner. Many question, also, the wisdom of the constant cleaning which give our streets the spick and span appearance which is such a source of local pride. Few realize, however, that the life of the roadway is strengthened by this very work and that it is economy as well as good advertising to keep them in good condition.

The Street Department has many duties to perform, besides the construction, care and maintenance of the streets. It constructs and maintains our large system of sewers, it builds miles of gravel and concrete sidewalks, gutters and cross-walks every year, it builds and maintains a system of drains, including the cleaning and widening of brooks, it collects and removes ashes and papers from all over the city, it treats streets with dust layers, and it sees to the old and locates the new street lights. The department has four important divisions, office, highway, sewer and street lights, the most important being that of highways, as will be seen referring to the equipment. The administrative division is under one street commissioner, three highway division foreman, one general foreman in charge of sewer work, one store-keeper at supply, one time-keeper and clerk and see office assistants.

The city is divided into three districts, each in charge of a highway division foreman; the largest section being Division A, covering Wards 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7; Division B, Wards 3 and 4; Division C, Wards 5 and 6. The work consists of repairs and construction of roadways, the cleaning of streets and gutters, catch basins and drains, the building of sidewalks, and the removal of snow. The divisions on the north side of the city have modern and commodious brick stables, and there is great need of another on the south side of the city; the present accommodations at Newton Centre being inadequate for that section. The Crafts street stable has a well-equipped machine shop, and a machinist has charge of all the incidental repairs required on the road rollers, stone crushers and other machinery. The department also employs blacksmiths, who shoe all the city horses and sharpen tools, and a wheelwright, who makes all the city carts and wagons, sleds and snow plows.

The employment of the mechanics and laborers is regulated by the Civil Service Commission. The average number of laborers, 267, work an eight-hour day for a minimum wage of $2.25. The average weekly payroll amounts to $3768. The total days worked in an ordinary week is 1574 with an average cost per capita of $2.39 per day.

In the construction of concrete sidewalks, cross-walks and gutters, the city prepares the foundations, the contractor doing the remainder of the work. In all other cases, including street sprinkling, the city does the entire work, and usually receives the full equivalent for its money.

Petitions for concrete sidewalks, where the abutters agree to pay one-half the cost, are presented to the street commissioner and the work is done in connection with other work in the same vicinity. When all the abutters will not agree to pay their share of the cost of concrete, a petition is usually sent to the aldermen to order the work done under the betterment act, which authorizes the city to assess the cost on the abutters. A hearing is given and the work may then be ordered by the Board if it deems the conditions warrant such action.

Aldermen Reverse Previous Act and Appropriate $2000 for New Bureau

The first meeting of the aldermen after the long summer vacation was marked with spirited debates on two important matters and the raising of more parliamentary questions than all the rest of the year together.

President Blanchard was the sole absentee. Vice-President Winslow was in the chair and he handled the complicated situations with considerable skill.

The first matter for debate was an order requesting the Mayor to submit a supplementary budget to allow for overtime pay in the Engineering department, which was adopted by a vote of 15 to 5. The second matter of importance was the reconsideration of the order defeated last July for $200 to establish a Bureau of Public Markets in this city. This was also adopted by a vote of 13 to 7.

There were numerous hearings most of them being routine in character. Mr. A. J. Doyle opposed Edison Light poles on Churchill street and written remonstrances were sent in by J. B. Robson, J. L. Sibley and Mrs. Cook. Remonstrances were also filed by J. R. Chandler, Emily M. Porter, and Mrs. C. Koenig against sewers in Ridge road, in Waban and the petitioner, Mrs. Ames asked to withdraw account of the opposition. Mrs. Mary M. Morse also sent in a protest against the laying out of Elmwood street.

Other hearings were held on Edison poles on Page road, Lagrange street, Vine street, Waverley avenue, Edison and Telephone poles on Bacon street, on public garages by George C. Weed, Newtonville, Furbush Bros., West Newton, James P. Ramee, West Newton, M. T. Mehigan, Commonwealth avenue, to keep and sell gasoline by C. G. Carley, and A. H. Geyer Co., and on laying a sewer in Harvard street extension, on laying out of Morseland avenue under betterment act, and from Charles E. Lord, Claremont street, Lasell Seminary, Woodland road and Miss Lucy W. Burr, Hancock street to keep private garages, the last three being immediately granted. Mayor Childs' appointment of the Election officers for 1915 were unanimously confirmed and his appointment of John Allen as a Public Weigher was laid over for one meeting.

The Mayor also recommended a change of polling place in Waban, for increase of Soldiers' relief for Mrs. Alger, for various small grants and a transfer in the Sidewalk account, $200 additional for clerks in the Assessing office and $100 for shower baths in the Bowen school at Thompsonville.

Petitions of D. B. Rich, Chas. Scipione and T. D. Murphy for auctioneer licenses, of M. Lipschitz and Dennis Murphy for wagon licenses, of C. B. Holden for an automobile license, and of Peter Pierotti for a victualler license were granted. Other petitions were for sewers in Upland and Avon roads, Waban Hill road, Farlow road, Brackett road, and Cedar street, of Ida E. Ericson for intelligence office in Newtonville, of the Telephone Co. for attachments on Elm street, Beacon street, Fayette street and Crafts street, and of the Edison Co. for attachments on Vine street, Homer street, Tremont street and for removal of pole on Watertown street. W. A. Sweet also asked for $120 to maintain a public convenience station, corner of Commonwealth avenue and Washington street.

On recommendation of committees leave to withdraw was granted on sewer in Wessex road, Waban and Upland roads, sewers were ordered in Hyde street, Farlow road, Waban Hill road, Harvard street, etc., hearings ordered on sewers in Brackett road, Hood and Rogers streets, water mains ordered in Avalon road, Beacon street, Brackett road, Collins road, Commonwealth avenue, Farlow road, Linwood Avenue, Morton street, Royce road and Wyoming street, a new polling place in the Wolcott school assigned for Waban, $200 granted for clerks in assessors' office, increase in Soldiers' Relief given Mrs. Alger, inexpedient to provide automobile liability insurance for city officials, no action necessary on street sprinkling protest on Aspen avenue, and granting pool table license for Elmwood Club.

Orders were also passed for street

There are four candidates, two of them new men, both residents of Ward 7, who seek the seat of Mr. Bothfeld, not a candidate this year.

The keenness of their contest may bring about the nomination of both, thus defeating one of the present Representatives, Mr. Allen or myself.

If my record is approved, I ask Republicans not to neglect to vote for me.

A PERSONAL STATEMENT

My opponent for the Republican nomination for representative at the state primary, next Tuesday, is considerably concerned over the fact that I hold the position of Clerk of Committees to the Newton Board of Aldermen, and possibly a word of explanation may serve to clear the situation.

The office of Clerk of Committees is subject to an annual election, each January by the board of aldermen.
The Clerk of Committees for 1916 will be elected next January, by the board of aldermen of that year, fourteen members of which, are to be elected by the people next December, and it might be considered presumptuous on my part, to assume what their action might be.

Personally I am rather proud of the fact that in the eighteen years I have had the honor of filling that office by unanimous election, I have never solicited or canvassed for a single vote, and I do not, at this time, intend to break that record.

J. C. Brimblecom.

The coming state primary has several contests for the Republican nominations for various offices and possibly a fair comment on the situation may be of interest to the average voter.

For Governor

The real contest for this office is between Mr. McCall and Mr. Cushing, the candidacy of Mr. Foss being almost a joke. It seems to be the general opinion that Mr. McCall made such a fine showing last year when Republican victory seemed almost hopeless, that he is clearly entitled to another opportunity to appeal to the voters. Mr. McCall has the ability, the independence, and all the other qualities necessary to make a good governor. Mr. Cushing, on the other hand, however well qualified for the office, should have allowed Mr. Mc-Call another chance for the position.

In addition Mr. Cushing has played with political fire in his position on the so called sectarian amendment to the constitution, on which so able a lawyer as Mr. Samuel J. Elder, has rendered an opinion that the decision of the Supreme Court amply covers all the ground which Mr. Cushing is trying to make a political issue. These two matters, ought to put a quietus on the Cushing campaign.

For Lieutenant-Governor

The contest between President of the Senate Calvin Cushing and of Councillor Guy A. Ham for this office does not divide so clearly as that for governor. Mr. Ham has the advantage of service in both the legislative and executive branches of the state government and so would probably have more actual experience in the comparatively unimportant duties of Lieutenant governor. Mr. Ham, however, is one of the ablest speakers in the Republican party, has rendered splendid service on the stump for many years.
He has a pleasing personality, and is a good vote getter. His business experience, as will be seen from an article in another column is of a high grade, and his nomination will be highly pleasing to the younger and more progressive elements of the party. Mr. Coolidge is of a more conservative nature, and might almost be classed with the reactionary portion of the party. He is not a good speaker and could be of but little service in that direction. Either Mr. Ham or Mr.
Coolidge would be a credit to the Republican ticket, but Mr. Ham would bring a large and loyal following, and help to swell the Republican victory which seems so near at hand.

is to say, it will not be possible to have a ballot counted for ANY office whatever, if the voter, for instance, marks for Republican candidates for representatives and for a Democratic candidate for governor. Voters should remember that the primary ballot is simply for the NOMINATION and is NOT an election. Friends of the editor of the GRAPHIC who is one of the Republican candidates will please confine their choice for other state offices to the Republican ticket.

A sample form of the new ballot is printed in another column, showing how the ballot should be correctly marked in order to be counted, and how it may be improperly marked, and thereby thrown out by the election officers.

The Republican platform this year ought to contain strong planks, pledging the party to favor national prohibition, to a more conservative management of the finances of the state and to a reform in methods of taxation.
There should also be a plank in regard to prohibiting the transportation of liquor into no license communities by liquor dealers. Governor Walsh is in bad by his veto of a similar bill last spring and it is an issue of considerable merit.

The officials of the B. & A. deserve the hearty thanks of the patrons of the Newton station for the great improvement made by filling in between the rails of the inbound tracks at that station.

Possibly the new Bureau of Public Markets in this city may have to hire a Hall.

FOR REPUBLICAN REPRESENTA- TIVE

peared in the "Newton Times":

Presumably, Messrs. Allen and Weston will be renominated and elected to the House of Representatives, leaving only one place, that made vacant by the retirement of Mr. Bothfield, open to contest. Newton, we believe will choose its own interests as well as those of the state by sending Mr. John C.
Brimblecom.

A Newton boy, educated in our public schools, Mr. Brimblecom has had an exceptional training and experience for the position. For many years, as clerk of committees at City Hall, he has had a knowledge of municipal affairs probably unmatched in the entire city, within or without its government.

As the editor of the NEWTON GRAPH-IC he has, as a matter of course, come to know the community thoroughly.
These opportunities Mr. Brimblecom has improved and to his knowledge of local affairs he has added, through his interest in State House matters, a good working acquaintance with men and things there.

Give Mr. Brimblecom, as well as Messrs. Allen and Weston, a good vote at the primaries. It would save considerable trouble to settle the whole matter then and there, making sure of three useful and creditable members of the House from Newton.

of Newton cheerfully

The following editorial printed in is reprinted at this time by request of friends.

It is a matter of regret to many persons that the aldermen have not seen fit to recommend an increase of 25 cents per day in the wages of the city laborers. The reasons advanced by the committee for refusing the advance are sound from a business standpoint, and will appeal to business men but is there not a humanitarian aspect to the matter which should have had some consideration.
While many persons take considerable stock in the assertion that a municipal government can be run strictly on business principles, in actual practice, this has been found to be almost impossible. Too many outside elements enter into the matter to allow it to be adjusted by a hard and fast rule of this kind. The state recognizes this element by its provisions for pensions of various forms, in the demand that the poor and the insane shall be provided for in a decent manner and in many other humane ways. And in its treatment of its laborers the city should also consider certain facts on the lines already indicated by the state. It is said that the average city laborer in Newton receives an income of but $490 a year, or less than $10 per week, and on this sum he is expected to live, raise his family and keep out of debt. The Street Commissioner is authority for the statement that Newton has as efficient a corps of laborers as exists in the state; that it is the result of constant weeding out of the less desirable men, leaving an experienced body of laborers fit for the regular routine work of the city. This experience should be recognized and at least a living wage paid for such service. The suggestion advanced by the committee that more permanent work be given the men, who would thereby receive a larger annual income, is more theoretical than practical. The bulk of the work on which common labor is employed must necessarily be done during the summer months. The work which can be done during the winter is not only limited in scope, but is also limited as to the number of men who can be employed, and as a matter of fact has always been given to the more experienced men who already receive at least $2.25 per day. In only one way can the common laborer in this city receive the larger income which is actually needed and that is by granting the proposed increase in his wages per day.

It doesn't take a good looker long to find a husband.

MR. BYFIELD DEAD

Mr. George D. Byfield, a resident of this city for fifty years died suddenly al months. Mr. Byfield was president of the Mellish & Byfield Corporation, manufacturers of furniture. He was a prominent member of the Ma-

He is survived by a widow, one

REPRESENTATIVE J. WESTON ALLEN

Renominate Representative Allen STRONGLY ENDORSED BY PROMINENT CITIZENS

To the Voters of Newton.

Representative J. Weston Allen of Newton Highlands, who is a candidate for renomination at the primary on Tuesday, has made an excellent record in the Legislature this year, and should receive the unanimous support of the Republicans of Newton. It has long been the custom to elect one of the three Newton representatives from the south side of the city, and Mr. Allen is the only candidate this year from that section.

He was appointed to the Chairmanship of the Committee on Bills in the Third Reading, being one of two first-year members selected by Speaker Conway for a Chairmanship. As Chairman of this Committee he had a large part in redrafting and amending many important bills, and his work has won high praise from members of both parties in the House and Senate.

He also served as a member of the Committee on Banks and Banking, and was chairman of the sub-committee on Rural Credits. He was the author of the Farm Land Bank Act and of the Act relative to the incorporation and Government of Credit Unions, which were reported by this Committee to extend the present facilities for rural credits and small loans.

He was also active in support of the bill to confine to express companies the transportation of intoxicating liquors in no-license communities and in legislation for tax reform.

We believe Mr. Allen's services should receive the hearty endorsement of the voters of Newton.

VIOLIN SCHOOL

The Makehnie Violin School, in which many Newton families have been interested during several years past, opens for the season of 1915-6 with prospects of an attendance exceeding that of any preceding year. Preparations are already making for the annual recital in Ford Hall which occurring in the autumn gives the public an admirable chance to observe the exacting standard of artistic finish to which the pupils of this school attain. The violincello department, which was added last season, has proved very successful. It is continued in charge of Miss Florence Colby whose playing at Mr. Makehnie's Riverbank Court recital of last spring made a very favorable impression. Pupils studying this popular instrument follow a course similar to that of the violin students, with a combination of private lessons and class instruction.

A REMARKABLE GROWTH

Nine years ago this Fall the Reddin school started out on its career as a shorthand and business college. One small room was really more than sufficient to accommodate its needs; today the school occupies four large rooms on the 6th floor of the Walker Building, 120 Boylston street, Boston, and at the present rate of progress will have to add still another room.

Last year 120 pupils enrolled with Miss Reddin, a majority of whom passed the Civil Service examinations and are now holding good government positions as clerks and stenographers.

Day sessions began Sept. 7; evening sessions began Sept. 8.

The beautiful surroundings of the Club presented a dazzling sight, with the vari-colored electric globes, and Japanese lanterns gleaming thru the foliage of the trees. Dinner was served from 6 until 8 in the spacious dining hall of the Club house, and a delightful concert during the dinner was furnished by the 8th Mass. Infantry Band of Lynn.

DEATH OF MR. SHURBERT

Mr. Mitchel L. Shurbert died at his residence 1612 Washington street, West Newton, Mass., Sept. 9th, 1915, after a lingering illness of three years. Funeral services were held Saturday at 3 P. M. Four members of the West Newton Lodge, I. O. O. F. acted as bearers, and the usual rites of the Order were performed. There were many beautiful floral tributes, consisting of twenty-one large set pieces and many smaller ones. Interment in Newton Cemetery. Mr. Shurbert was born in St. Albans, Vt., June 2, 1851. He came to Deerfield, N. H., at the age of thirteen years to the home of Capt. Eben Marston and family, and remained there eighteen years until his marriage to Miss Mary Eliza Greenleaf in 1882. They continued to reside in Deerfield for six years, then in Northwood, N. H., for eighteen years, and lastly in West Newton for nine years, where he was employed as a foreman of the farm and garden of Mrs. W. E. Barrett, who was very kind and generous during his long illness and death. Mr. Shurbert learned the carpenter trade in Concord, N. H., and followed it for many years, and also was a good practical farmer. He joined Union Lodge, No. 32, I. O. O. F. of Deerfield, N. H., about 1892. He is survived by his wife, one son, Henry M. of Windsor, Conn., one daughter Louise E. of West Newton and one brother Francis C. of Deerfield, N. H., also by many distant relations and a large circle of friends. He was a kind husband, indulgent father, a good neighbor and Odd Fellow.

BENTON—WILKINS

The wedding of Mr. Austin Corning Benton of Homer street, Newton Centre and Miss Mary Elizabeth Wilkins, the daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth A. Wilkins of Cambridge, took place at the First Parish Unitarian Church of that city last Saturday evening, the ceremony being performed at eight o'clock by Rev. Dr. E. W. Hunt of the First Baptist Church of Newton Centre.

The bride was gowned in white with a short veil and carried a bouquet of sweet peas and lilies of the valley. The matron of honor, Mrs. George Payne of Worcester was in yellow taffeta and carried brown eyed Susans. Miss Norma P. Wheeler of Brookline and Miss Margaret Wilkins of Cambridge wore blue taffeta and carried baskets of cosmos. Mr. Edward Skillings of Boston was the best man and the ushers were Messrs. Roland and Frank Wilkins of New York, Corning Benton of Newton Centre, George Yeaton of Dorchester, William Battalio of Boston and Herbert Kendall of Newton. Alice Breen of Watertown acted as the flower girl.

A reception in the parish house followed the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Benton being assisted in receiving their guests by Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Benton, Mrs. E. A. Wilkins and Mr. W. O. Wilkins.

Mr. and Mrs. Benton will reside at The Humboldt, Cambridge, where they will be at home after Dec. 1st. Many a man who is well off is well on in years.

N. H. S.

The opening of school Monday, September 13, was marked by even more than the usual amount of uncertainty and confusion. The corridors were very crowded, and the passages became blocked by new pupils who were unable to find their way from room to room. This was largely due to the fact that the entire Technology College Course had been transferred from the Technical School to the old building. With the large freshman class, this change brought into the school an unusual number of students who were unfamiliar with their surroundings.

Very little work has been accomplished in the classes so far, progress being hampered Monday by the confusion, and on the next two days by the shortened periods and the intense heat.

Wednesday the heat in the rooms became so unbearable that it was thought advisable to close the school early. Accordingly, the last three periods were shortened to fifteen minutes each, and school was dismissed at 11:50.

The call for football candidates was issued Monday morning, and the first practice was held at Claffin Field that afternoon. Only twenty-six candidates reported at that time, and Tuesday, owing to the heat, merely twenty-one came out. Captain Dorney and Vachon are the only two "N" men who have reported. Comick, the one other veteran player who was not lost through graduation, was injured this summer while playing ball on one of the playgrounds, and will be unable to play football this fall.

Wednesday the weather was so warm that Coach Dickinson decided to call off the practice. Taking advantage of the afternoon of rest, sixteen of the squad accompanied the coach to Cambridge, and learned some points while watching the Harvard practice.

Coch Dickinson is greatly disappointed because of the lack of interest in football shown this year. He says that Newton should certainly turn out more than twenty-six candidates, when other high schools have sixty or seventy. Mr. Dickinson also believes that unless at least fifty boys come out this fall, Newton High will be represented by a very weak team.

Alfred Turner, Newton's star football player of last season, has been forced by severe illness to return to his home in Cuba.

Arthur Loherts, captain of the 1914 track team, sprained his ankle slightly while practising the high jump Monday. He expects that his foot will have recovered its strength before the track season begins.

HIGH SCHOOL

Mr. M. W. Murray, Director of the Newton Vocational School, has made during the past summer a survey of the industrial opportunities open to young people in the city of Scranton, Pennsylvania.

This survey was necessitated by the bequest to the city of a million and a half dollars by the late O. R. Johnson, for the purpose of endowing an industrial or technical school in Scranton.

FOR COUNTY TREASURER

There is no office within the gift of the people of Middlesex County which requires the administration of an honorable, careful, competent, experienced and responsible man as does the County Treasurer, and we, citizens of Somerville, personally acquainted with Joseph O. Hayden for many years, feel that the County is fortunate to have as faithful an official as he has proved himself to be. For thirty years he has been in charge of the finances of Middlesex. He was first chosen because of his reputation as a capable accountant and financial standing and for his satisfactory service in places of trust.

He has fully justified the expectations of his friends. Constant in attendance at his office, courteous and kindly to all with whom he comes in contact, accurately informed on all county business and economical in administration, he has made the Middlesex treasurer's office the standard for the state. He has handled over $40,- 000,000 of the County's money, accounting satisfactorily for every cent and has easily adapted himself and his office to the steady increase of business due to legislation and the natural growth of the County.

Mr. Hayden is still in the full vigor of life. He is sixty-eight years old, and his experience and constant study of County problems and finances make him far more capable and efficient to-day than when he first entered the office.

Voters are urged to scrutinize with utmost care the character, standing and business capacity of any who present themselves for this office. Mr.

Hayden's honorable career is widely known, and others should be at least equal ability, integrity and standing to make them worthy of the great trust which Mr. Hayden so creditably holds.

Aside from his long service as Country Treasurer Mr. Hayden is a prominent, public-spirited and highly esteemed citizen of Somerville, where he has lived for fifty years. He is a candidate for re-nomination at the primaries on September 21, and we earnestly urge voters of Middlesex to go to the polls and vote for the re-nomination of County Treasurer Joseph O. Hayden.

The Exploits of Elaine

A Detective Novel and a Motion Picture Drama

SYNOPSIS.

The New York police are mystified by a series of murders and other crimes. The principal culprit is the criminal who is the mastermind behind them. He sends the victims, signed with a "clutching hand." The latest victim of the mysterious assassin is Taylor Dodge, the insurance president. His daughter, Elaine, employs Craig Kennedy, a famous scientific detective, to try to unravel the mystery. What Kennedy accomplishes is told by his friend Jameson, a newspaper man. Enraged at the determined efforts of Elaine and Craig, Long Sin, the Clutching Hand, makes an attempt to put an end to his crimes.

"ELAINE DODGE, THE HEIRESS, WHOSE BATTLE WITH THE CLUTCHING HAND IS CREATING WORLD-WIDE INTEREST."

"Now," he began at last, breaking the silence, "I'll show you just what I want you to do."

He went over to the wall and took down a curious long Chinese knife from a scabbard which hung there conspicuously.

"See that?" he added, holding it up.

Before she could say a word he had plunged the knife, apparently, into his own breast.

"Oh!" cried Mary, startled. She expected to see him fall. But nothing happened. Wong laughed. It was an oriental trick knife, in which the blade telescoped into the handle.

"Look at it," he added, handing it to her.

Long Sin took a bladder of water from a table near by and concealed it under his coat. "Now, you stab me," he directed.

Mary hesitated. But he repeated the command and she plunged the knife gingerly at him. It telescoped. He made her try it over, and she stabbed him more resolutely. The water from the bladder poured out.

"Good!" cried Long Sin, much pleased. "Now," he added, seating himself beside her, "I want you to lure Elaine here."

Anyone, however, who had been watching Long Sin would have seen that he showed much interest whenever any of the wealthy residents of the city were mentioned. The name of Elaine Dodge seemed particularly interesting to him.

Kennedy, who had been busy at the other end of the laboratory, happened to look over in my direction. "What's the big idea, Walter?" he asked.

It was, I admit, a rather cumbersome and clumsy affair.

"Well, you see, Craig," I explained, "you put the top mirror through the transom of a door and—"

Kennedy interrupted with a hearty burst of laughter. "But suppose the door has no transom?" he asked, pointing to his own door.

I scratched my head thoughtfully. I had assumed that the door would have a transom. A moment later Craig went to the cabinet and drew out a tube about as big around as a punty blower and as long.

"Now, here's what I call my detectoscope," he remarked. "None of your mirrors for me."

"Oh, thank you," exclaimed Elaine. "Won't you come in?"

They had scarcely greeted each other when Long Sin strolled along. Neither of them, however, had time to notice the quiet Chinaman who passed the house, looking at Elaine sharply out of the corner of his eye. They entered and Wong disappeared down the street.

"Isn't it a beauty?" cried Elaine, holding it out from her as they entered the library, and examining it with great appreciation. "And, oh, do you know, the strangest thing happened yesterday! Sometimes Mr. Kennedy acts too queerly for anything."

She related how Craig had burst in on her and Aunt Josphine and had almost torn the other watch off her wrist.

"Another watch?" repeated Bennett. "It must have been a mistake. Kennedy is crazy."

"I don't understand it, myself," murmured Elaine.

Long Sin was revolving some dark and devious plan beneath his impassive Oriental countenance. He was no ordinary personage. In fact, he was astute enough to have no record. He left that to his tools.

This remarkable criminal had established himself in a hired apartment down town.

Long Sin, now in rich Oriental costume, was reclining on a divan smoking a strange-looking pipe and playing with two pet white rats. Each white rat had a gold band around his leg, to which was connected a gold chain about a foot in length, and the chain ended in rings which were slipped over Wong's little fingers. Ordinarily he carried the pets up the capacious sleeve of each arm.

"Do you realize how little you can really see through a keyhole?" he repeated confidently. "Try it over there."

I did, and, to tell the truth, I could see merely a little part of the hall. Then Kennedy inserted the detectoscope.

FOR COUNTY TREASURER

Saturday evening Harold D. Wilson of Somerville, candidate for the Republican nomination for county treasurer of Middlesex, spoke at an open air rally at Newton Corner before a crowd of about 200.

Mr. Wilson who is a "live," energetic Republican, emphasized the following five points:

"1st, I believe there should be a change in the office of county treasurer because I believe I am fitted for the position by training and experience and that I can give the county more efficient and valuable service than the present incumbent."

"2nd, It is not good policy for the Republican party to stand for perpetual terms of office. My opponent has held the office for 30 years."

"3rd, It is unwise to allow any man however honest to monopolize our finances for 30 years."

"4th, It is time to modernize our finances."

"5th, My opponent already has 3 other positions and is not giving us full value for the money we are paying him."

POVERTY ABROAD

A postcard was received this week by V. J. Schofield of Newton, from Henry Vermette, formerly of Centre street, Newton, who, at the outbreak of the war, went to enter his brother's chemical laboratory in Leipzig.

The card, written in English, bears a Leipzig postmark, and in addition an Austrian postmark, indicating that it took a southern steamer to the United States.

Mr. Vermette says: "I am very glad to hear from you. But on your last letter I had to pay 25 pfennig. I wouldn't mind if I had money, but as I am very poor now, 25 pfennig is a lot to me. I wish you would send me a few dollars, as I need it more than ever to buy bread in these terrible times. Dollars are so scarce over here! After the war is over I can tell you better why I am so in need now."

Mr. Vermette's present address is 5 Thomasin St., Leipzig. It is considered surprising that the postcard evaded the censors, considering that it was in English and also that it told a pitiful story of German poverty.

AUTO ACCIDENT

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Hurd of 15 Allerton street, Newton Highlands, and Mrs. Charles C. Brown of 1471 Centre street, Newton, were injured Sunday evening in Medford square when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by an in-bound Elevated car and dragged 20 feet before the motorman was able to shut off the power.

The Hurd party consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Hurd, Mrs. Brown and Mr. Hurd's daughter and son, Miss Mabelle Brown and Bert Brown, who was driving. They were coming from Boston and just taking the turn to Winchester when the Elevated car, in charge of Motorman Nathan Miller and Conductor Ira A. Harvey, struck the machine.

Mrs. Brown sustained a fractured left arm, several bad cuts on the face and was so badly shaken up that she was removed to the Medford Hospital. Mrs. Hurd was cut on the face, while Mr. Hurd received several bruises on the face and arms. The driver and Miss Hurd escaped injury.

It is hard sometimes to understand how a small article can do a multitude of things, but it is possible.

Take for example, the "Thermax" Fan-sink Stove, which is advertised in another part of this paper. This stove is only six inches in diameter, weighs only 7½ pounds, yet it is almost impossible to enumerate all the uses to which it can be adapted.

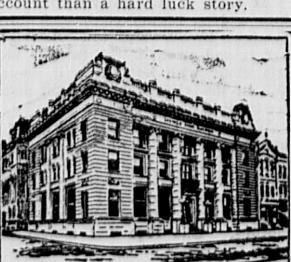

Perhaps the greatest advantage of this stove is the perfect heat control obtained by having four different heats, ranging from 650 to 150 watts. This makes it practical for almost any purpose. You can not only bring a dish quickly to the boiling point, but can keep it at an even low temperature.

This little stove is not only a household necessity when light or irregular meals are desired, but is practically invaluable for the sick-room. Here its cleanliness and absence from soot or odor makes it possible to prepare broths or any dish for the invalid. It can also be used for preparing hot applications or in sterilizing instruments.

There are many other uses for this stove, however, such as heating water in barber shops, heating glue for cabinet makers, bookbinders, etc., and heating irons and shaping hats in shoeeshining shops.

Rather than make an effort to reach the top some men remain at the bottom and help to pull others down.

People would rather listen to a bank account than a hard luck story.

ALDERMEN FAVOR MARKETS

sprinkling and moth work assessments for the current year.

Alderman Murphy opposed the order requesting the mayor to recommend $100 for overtime work in the Engineering Department. He said the Comptroller had refused to approve the wages due an inspector for work done on the Thompsonville sewer on Saturday afternoons and Sundays, although the city solicitor had ruled that there was sufficient appropriation to pay for the same. While Mr. Murphy believed the Comptroller ought to be a big man, he thought it a dangerous step for a city official to refuse to follow the ruling of the city solicitor. He also stated that the mayor had informally refused to recommend this appropriation, for he was the city solicitor.

Alderman Pratt said that the Comptroller was in an unfortunate position, for the city solicitor has recommended him to do something impossible from an accounting standpoint. The board established all the salaries to be paid in the engineering department in the annual budget and the Comptroller can find no authority to pay any one a larger sum than that stated in the budget. The suggestion to pay this man from another appropriation was not good accounting, but he could readily see that the mayor and the city solicitor, not being accountants, do not understand the situation.

Comptroller John Daholl was asked to state the matter, and said that he must disapprove any pay roll which called for a greater rate of wages than that ordered in the budget. The only control he had was to compare the roll with the budget, and while he regretted to disagree with the city solicitor, he felt he must have an appropriation to which this matter could be properly charged.

City Solicitor Bishop explained the matter as he understood it, and said that as the board had made an appropriation for the sewer, part of which was for sewer inspection, he believed there was an appropriation from which this overture could be paid.

Alderman Pratt said that the portion of the sewer appropriation for engineering was taken care of in the budget, and that it was usually covered by a transfer. The budget fixed salaries, however, and while he thought the board had gone into too much detail in fixing these salaries, the order of the board should be upheld.

Alderman Early said that the amount should be charged to the appropriate sewer which was intended for that purpose.

Alderman Harriman thought that the sewer appropriation covered the matter, but he also believed that the board should uphold the Comptroller in all such matters.

Alderman Cox suggested that if overture had been allowed, it ought to be made up by giving the man time at other parts of the week.

Alderman Jamieson said that the new system of accounting was intended to keep our accounts straight and that it was a great advantage over the former loose methods of book-keeping. The Comptroller ought to have authority over the books and accounting and the simplest way out of the present trouble was to request the appropriation, which had really been an omission of the annual budget.

The order was then passed 15 to 5. The matter of establishing a Bureau of Public Markets came up when Alderman Cobb moved a reconsideration of the vote whereby the board had refused to pass the order at the last regular meeting. Alderman Forknall raised a question regarding the right to reconsider and appealed when the chair ruled against him. The chair was sustained by a vote of 14 to 5 and reconsideration prevailed by a vote of 11 to 8.

Alderman Clark favored the order at this time that the citizens might take advantage of the fall markets and have the assistance of Mr. Wheeler and Mr. Hall in starting the Bureau. Alderman Cox didn't see why there was need of so much money, as $2000 was deemed sufficient last July, and six weeks had elapsed.

Alderman Forknall wanted the board to go slow, as $2000 was only an entering wedge, $15,000 would be wanted next year and the Lord only knew what would be needed after that. The plan was for but one market, but others would be demanded in other parts of the city.

Mr. H. W. Hall was asked some questions regarding the market matter, and the order was amended so as to charge the amount to Excess and Deficiency account instead of to the tax levy.

Alderman Forknall attempted to enter a charter objection to the passage of the order, but after a short recess, the chair ruled that a charter objection could not be made by one person at that time, and the order was then adopted by a vote of 13 to 7, Aldermen Allen, Alley, Bartlett, Cabot, Calkins, Forknall and Pratt voting in the negative.

The board adjourned until Sept. 27.

important duty of the department, as every business man wishes a clear walk to the railroad station or electric car after a snow storm. This work is done by men who have been long in the city's employ, and they have well planned routes to follow. The whole distance covered is about three hundred miles.

Petitions for new street lights are also filed with the Street Commissioner and when approved by the Mayor are usually granted. Each location is carefully looked into by the Street Commissioner, who confers with the representative of the different companies contracting to furnish the lights. All electric lights are furnished by the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston under a ten year contract, 1909-1919. All gas lights are furnished by the Newton & Watertown Gas Light Company under a three year contract, 1914-1917. Daily reports are received from the Police Department for defective lights which are checked in the office, reported to the companies, and deducted before payment of the monthly account. There were 3022 lights in the city in use September 1st, as follows:—

Electrics, 1961; Arcs, 162; Incandescents, 1799; Gas, 1061.

The collection and removal of ashes and papers is attended to by the city forces under an ordinance enacted in November, 1914. The appropriation for this work is $26,000.

Sewer Division. There are three distinct kinds of work in this division, each one of which receives its money from a different source. The construction of new sewers, the connecting of houses with present sewers, and the maintenance of the entire system, including cleaning and flushing of both main and lateral sewers. The last work is usually done during the winter and early spring under a special appropriation of $11,800. The cleaning of small sewers is done by filling the manhole with water to flush the pipe. Larger sewers are cleaned with scrapers and some by hand.

The construction of new sewers is done only when ordered by the board of aldermen. The city engineer's department gives the lines and grades for all city work. Sewer construction varies from laying the ordinary 8-inch pipe in side streets to 36-inch pipes or 48-inch brick main sewers.

House Connections are made only on the written application of the property owner, and may be paid on the tax-bill if so desired.

The advent of the automobile and its increasing use of our roadways has during the past twelve years caused the street department a large expense. The automobile has also caused a new point of view regarding street sprinkling or dust laying as it should be more properly called. When we consider in the city of Newton the number of cars assessed for 1915 was about 1350 representing a value of about $1,407,150, we can see that this question covers an important item in reference to road building and street maintenance.

The office division of the department is an important factor in systematically the details of the reports of the work. A daily return is received from each of the divisions and the cost and summarized expenditures under the various appropriations are made up from these and reported weekly to the Comptroller's department.

All permits for street openings and obstructions by the public service corporations and individuals are made in the office and from January first to September 1st, the number issued is as follows:

For opening 375

For obstruction 62

All orders for supplies receive the personal attention of the street commissioner,

SYNOPSIS.

The New York police are mystified by a series of murders and other crimes. The principal clue to the criminal is the warning letter which is sent to the victims, signed with a "clutching hand." The latest victim of the mystery is Mrs. Taylor Dodge, the insurance president. Her daughter Elaine employs Craig Kennedy, the famous scientific detective, to try to unravel the mystery. What Kennedy accomplishes is to find out that the killer is a newspaper man. Enraged at the determined effort which Elaine and Craig Kennedy are making to put an end to his crimes, the Clutching Hand, as he is known, is known to resort to all sorts of the most diabolical schemes to put them out of the way. Each chapter of the story tells of a new plot against the life of Elaine, and of the great detective who uses all his skill to save this pretty girl and himself from death.

ELEVENTH EPISODE

THE HOUR OF THREE.

With the ominous forefinger of his Clutching Hand extended, the Master Criminal emphasized his instructions to his minions.

"Perry Bennett, her lawyer, is in favor again with Elaine Dodge," he was saying. "She and Kennedy are on the outs even yet. But they may become reconciled. Then she'll have that fellow on our trail again. Before that happens we must 'get' her—see?"

It was in the latest headquarters to which Craig had chased the criminal, in one of the toughest parts of New York's great river front section. "Now," went on the Clutching Hand, "I want you, Slim, to follow them. See what they do—where they go. It's her birthday. Something's bound to occur that will give you a lead. All you've got to do is to use your head. Get me!"

It was, as Clutching Hand had said, Elaine's birthday. She had received many callers and congratulations. Innumerable costly and beautiful tokens of remembrance from her countless friends and admirers. In the conservatory of the Dodge house Elaine, Aunt Josephine and Susie Martin were sitting discussing, not only the happy occasion, but more, the many strange events of the past few weeks. "Well," said a familiar voice behind them, "what would a certain blonde young lady accept as a birthday present from her family lawyer?"

All three turned in surprise.

"Oh, Mr. Bennett," cried Elaine, "How you startled us!"

Elaine hesitated. She was thinking not so much of his words as of Kennedy. To them all, however, it seemed that she was unable to make up her mind what, in the wealth of her luxury, what she would like.

Susie Martin had been wondering whether, now that Bennett was here, she was not too bold, as she looked, at her wrist watch mechanically. As she did so, an idea occurred to her.

"Why not one of these?" she cried impulsively, indicating the watch. "Father has some beauties at the shop."

"Oh, good," exclaimed Elaine, "how sweet!"

"Then let's all go to the shop," said Bennett. "Miss Martin will personally conduct the tour, and we shall have our pick of the finest stock."

It was too gay a party to notice a sinister figure following them in a cab.

Chatting with animation, the three moved over to the watch counter, while the crook, with a determination not to risk missing anything, entered the shop door, too.

"Mr. Thomas," asked Susie as her father's clerk bowed to them, "please show Miss Dodge the wrist watches father was telling about."

Unobserved, the crook walked over near enough to hear what was going on.

At last, with much banter and yet care, Elaine selected one that was indeed a beauty and was about to snap it on her dainty wrist when the clerk interrupted.

"I beg your pardon," he suggested, "but I'd advise you to leave it to be regulated, if you please."

Reluctantly Elaine handed it over to the clerk.

A moment later they went out and entered the car again.

As they did so, Slim, who had been looking over various things in the next case as if undecided, came up to the watch counter.

"I'm making a present," he remarked confidentially to the clerk. "How about those bracelet watches?"

The clerk pulled out some of the cheaper ones.

"No," he said thoughtfully, pointing out a tray in the showcase, "something like those."

He ended by picking out one identically like that which Elaine had selected, and started to pay for it.

"Better have it regulated," repeated the clerk.

"No," he objected hastily, shaking his head and paying the money quickly. "It's a present—and I want it to night."

He took the watch and left the store hurriedly.

In the laboratory, Kennedy was working over an oblong oak box, perhaps eighteen inches in length and last. "Where have you been? I've been off on a little job myself, and got back."

Slim apologized profusely. "Yes, sir," he replied hastily, "well, I went over to the Dodge house, and I saw them finally. I followed them into a jewelry shop. That lawyer bought a wrist watch. So I bought one just like it. I thought perhaps we could—"

"Give it to me," growled Clutching Hand, seizing it the moment Slim displayed it. "And don't butt in—see?"

From the capacious desk the master criminal pulled a set of small drills, vices, and other jeweler's tools and placed them on the table.

"All right," he relented. "Now, do you see what I have just thought of—not? This is just the chance. Look at me."

Carefully he pried his hands to the job, regardless of time.

"There," he exclaimed at last, holding the watch where they could all see it. "See!"

He pulled out the stem to set the hands and slowly twisted it between his thumb and finger. He turned the hands until they were almost at the point of three o'clock.

Then he held the watch out where all could see.

As the minute hand touched three, from the back of the case, as if from the chasing itself, a little needle, perhaps a quarter of an inch, jumped out. It seemed to come from what looked like merely a small insect in the decoration.

"You see what will happen at the hour of three?" he asked.

No one said a word, as he held up a vial which he could read from his pocket. On it they could read the label, "Ricinus."

"One of the most powerful poisons in the world," he exclaimed. "Enough to kill a regiment!"

They fairly gasped and looked at it with horror, exchanging glances.

Opening the vial carefully, he dipped in a thin piece of glass and placed a tiny drop in a receptacle back of the needle and on the needle itself.

"I've set my invention to go off at three o'clock," he concluded. "Tomorrow forenoon, it will have to be delivered early—and I don't believe we shall be troubled any longer by Miss Elaine Dodge," he added, venomously.

Calmly he wrapped up the apparently innocent engine of destruction and handed it to Slim.

"See that she gets it in time," he said merely.

"I will, sir," answered Slim, taking it gingerly.

Flirty Florry had returned that afternoon, late, from some expedition on which she had been sent.

Rankling in her heart yet was the death of her lover, Dan the Dude.

Thus, when she arrived home, she went to the telephone to report and called a number, 4494 Greenwich.

"Hello, chief," she repeated. "This is Flirty. Have you done anything yet in the little matter we talked about?"

"Say—be careful of names—over the wire," came a growl.

"You know—what I mean."

"Yes. The trick will be pulled off at three o'clock."

"Good!" she exclaimed. "Good-bye and thank you."

With his well-known caution Clutching Hand did not even betray names over the telephone if he could help it.

Flirty hung up the receiver with satisfaction. The manes of the departed Dan might soon rest in peace!

The next day, early in the forenoon, a young man with a small package carefully done up came to the Dodge house.

Elaine and Aunt Josephine were sitting in the library when Jennings announced him.

"Oh, it's my watch," cried Elaine. "Show him in."

Elaine put the watch on her wrist and admired it.

"Is it all right?" asked Slim.

"Yes, yes," answered Elaine. "You may go."

Back in the new hang-out, the Clutching Hand was laying down the law to his lieutenants and heelers, when Slim at last entered.

"Huh!" growled the master criminal, conveying the fact that he was considerably relieved to see him at

by Flirty, recovered the telephone. Together we carried it to the laboratory.

There he set up a little instrument that looked like a wedge sitting up on end, in the face of which was a dial. Through it he began to run the wire from the spools, and, taking an earpiece, put another on my head over my ears.

He turned a switch and we listened eagerly.

First came several calls from people with bills, and she put them off most adroitly.

Then we heard a call that caused Kennedy to look at me quickly, stop the machine and start at that point over again.

"That's what I wanted," he said, as we listened in:

"Give me 4494 Greenwich."

"Hello."

"Hello, chief. This is Flirty. Have you done anything yet in the little matter we talked about?"

"Say—be careful of names—over the wire."

"You know—what I mean."

"Yes, the trick will be pulled off at three o'clock."

"Good! Good-bye, and thank you!"

"Good-bye."

Craig paused and considered a minute, then moved to the telephone.

"There's only one thing to do, and that's to follow out my original scheme," he said energetically. "Information, please."

"Where is Greenwich 4494?" he asked a moment later.

The minutes passed. "Thank you, sir," he cried, writing down on a pad an address on the West side, near the river front. Then turning to me, he exclaimed, "Walter, we've got him at last!"

Craig rose and put on his hat and coat thrusting a pair of opera glasses into his pocket, in case we should want to observe the place at a distance. I followed him excitedly. The trair was hot.

Kennedy and I came at last to the place on the West side where the crooked streets curved off.

Instead of keeping on until he came to the place we sought, he turned off and quickly slipped behind the shelter of a fence. There was a broken board in the fence and he bent down, gazing through with the opera glasses.

Across the lot was the new hang-out, a somewhat dilapidated, old-fashioned brick house of several generations back. Through the glass we could see an evil-countenanced crook slinking along. He mounted the steps and rang the bell, turning as he waited.

Shall the Proposed Amendment to the Constitution Enabling Women to Vote be Approved and Ratified

NO

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the National Organization for Woman Suffrage, will speak at Players' Hall, West Newton, Saturday evening, September 18th at eight o'clock. Admission, free.

CONFESIONS OF A REFORMED ANTI

Man Tells Why He Climbed Over the Fence

In trying to rescue the suffragists from the slough of despond, I succeeded finally in convincing myself that I was on the wrong track. Having exhausted all the "reasons" I could think of why woman should not have the ballot, I began to examine the reasons on the other side. After that in the deathless words of the immortal Shylock, there was "nothing to it."

To be perfectly frank, my change of heart is due primarily to an anti-speaker. One night she freed her system of this sapient counsel: "Those who are on the fence should climb down, for it is a very undignified position." I agreed with her. For me, the only question remaining to decide was: "Of which side of the fence shall I alight?"

It required some little time to make up my mind. In the first place it never had occurred to me that women were especially clamorous for the ballot. I found that both the suffragists and the anti-suffragists were utilizing the majority argument. One reasoned: "Should a minority be permitted to force upon a majority, something a majority doesn't want." From the opposite camp came this in a voice of thunder: "Has any considerable body of persons, even a majority, a right to say in a democracy, 'Even if a minority does want to vote, it shall not be permitted to do so. Has a minority no intellectual, social or economic rights that are entitled to respect?'"

Then I found somewhere: "A majority is a bugaboo. It has been more often wrong than right. Suppose a million vote on a question and one more than one-half is opposed—is there any justice in allowing that conclusion to prevail? Is there any justice in letting one decide for 500,000?"

I had the ball and was gaining ground!

I read the New York Times editorial against suffrage, and that was so insufferably dull and stupid as almost to convince me right then and there what a sinner I had been. Then I read the New York World's editorial renunciation, in which it yielded manfully to its ultimate conviction. In the first place, I admired the newspaper because it had the courage to reverse its engines. In the second place, I admired it on account of the quality of its logic. In addition to all this, being human, I could not withhold admiration from those devoted souls to whom no considerations of personal convenience or sacrifice were too potent to deter them from doing that which, in the development of civilization, must be done! All hail their knightly courage and typically American chivalry! Their only weapons are the weapons of reason—their only militancy the militancy of human justice. I honor them, one and all!

Down the line I marched and I found:

(1) A country where only half of the people have a voice in government is not a democracy but an autocracy.

(2) Women make all our lives possible—they walk in death's grim shadow to give us birth. To perpetuate the race they willingly make the last sacrifice—why should we not do a little something for them?

(3) What right has a man to take a woman's money in taxes and yet give her no voice in saying how it shall be spent?

(4) How can a man plume himself on his love of justice and still regard woman as little more than a chattel—a slave? How can he give the ballot to the ignorant among men

TAFT WOULD VOTE NO

Ex-President Taft Gives His Views on the Question of Votes for Women in the Saturday Evening Post of Sept. 11.

We think Mr. Taft is absolutely correct in his statements that suffrage is not an inalienable right; that the effect of granting women the suffrage is likely to be disastrous; that it would be a great injustice to force suffrage upon the majority of women against their will; that it would be the undesirable element which would be sure to vote in our large cities; that the effect of suffrage on woman's economic and social condition would be small; that injustice to women in the laws has been done away with without the ballot; that if women are ignorant slaves, as the suffragists maintain, that it is not desirable to enfranchise them; and that woman's going into politics will cause her to lose the consideration now given her.

We think Mr. Taft is mistaken in believing woman suffrage bound to come, as during the last year it has been defeated in twenty-four states, and will undoubtedly be defeated this fall in Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, and Massachusetts. We are much gratified with Mr. Taft's definite statement that if he were voting in a campaign state this fall he would certainly vote NO. He says in part:

"To regard the privilege and duty of voting an inalienable right inseparable from citizenship, like the right to protection by the Government at home or abroad, would lead to absurdity. On such a theory the suffrage should be extended to children and babes in arms."

The question, then, whether women shall be given the suffrage is to be argued and determined on the issue whether it would be better for the Government, for society and for the women that they should vote, and not on any a priori theory that it is their right.

The effect of woman suffrage upon women's economic and social condition will be comparatively small, because women as a class are not clearly distinct from the members of the present electorate, in their political, social and economic interests.

"Men and women have so many identical interests and so many opinions in common that the cleavage between the sexes as political classes has not been clear or marked. This is why woman suffrage as a practical issue has not arisen before the present generabury of the world must lose for her some of the consideration which has been heretofore accorded her when she was treated as a noncombatant, so to speak.

"If in any of the states now acting on the question I were called upon to vote I would vote against giving the suffrage, because I think to force it on an unwilling or indifferent majority of women lacking in needed training and general experience is to add to the electorate an element that will not improve its governing capacity. The women have been without a vote for now one hundred and twenty-five years and they have not really suffered by it. The Government has continued to be a good one.

"Their disabilities have been removed, their rights of life, liberty and property have been made equal to those of men."

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The season's work will open with a dinner on Sept. 29th to the officers and committeeen of the Association. E. W. Repairs are being made on all parts of the building so everything will be spick and span for the opening the latter part of the month. This week the boys' room is closed for repairs and games are being put in first class condition. The bowling alleys will open on Sept. 25th after having been put in fine condition.

Mr. R. W. Young the assistant physical director has accepted the position of physical director at the New Bedford Y. M. C. A. and leaves in a few days for that city.

Championship Baseball Series

Beginning, next Saturday the Newton Y. M. C. A. will cross bats with the Newton Catholic Union to decide the championship of this part of Newton, and it is hoped that the winner of this series will have an opportunity to play the winner of the Upper Falls-West Newton Catholic Club. Both teams expect to put on their strongest lineup. The Catholic Union will have the services of Sheridan and Morrison for a battery, while the Y. M. C. A. will have Bills and Allen to do the batter work and Graverson and Ely will be back in their regular positions in the infield and Halliday and Varley will be in the outfield with a good string of men to assist, Jud Beal and Johnny Hines, who have both been playing very consistent ball all season, will be in their regular positions in the infield. The game will start at 2.45. Both games will be played on the Association field and it is hoped that all the fans in and about Newton will gather to see the first of this important series.

The movement for woman suffrage has had its great source and impetus in the belief that great reform in the condition of women can be effected by law which men are reluctant to enact, but which woman will secure if given a voice in the government. It is pressed upon us that married women with the ballot will be able to protect themselves against the brutality and oppression of their husbands.

There are many respectable women of average intelligence whose interest, however, has not been roused, who are listless on the subject, and who would decline to make any sacrifice of time or convenience to perform their duty if given the franchise. In the country districts, where it takes effort to register and to vote, this is a serious matter even with men. It will be much more obstructive in the case of women. The women who actively oppose the extension of the franchise are, many of them, of the most intelligent class and their views would tend to keep them from the polls. It is a substantial reason why women will secure if given a voice in the government. HOW NEWTON IS GOVERNED

Eleventh of a Series of Articles Explaining the Management of the City

One of the greatest sources of pride in the American nation, is the attention given in this country to the education of children. From the earliest days of the republic there has been a constantly increasing interest taken in educational matters until at the present time, this door of opportunity is open to every child. This is particularly so in the city of Newton, where our schools have been long noted for their excellence.

It is not the purpose of this article to give an exhaustive review of what Newton has done in the past for its children or what it proposes to do in the future. It is written merely to give our readers some insight into a department which touches us so closely thru our children and which we frequently criticize without much reason.

The school department of this city is under the complete control of a school committee of seven members, elected, one from each ward for terms of three years each, the mayor serving as an ex officio member of the committee. The board organizes annually in January with the choice of a chairman and a secretary and holds monthly meetings in the Newton Technical High School building.

The work of the school committee is done in a committee of the whole, the former custom of work by sub committees having been discontinued when the size of the committee was reduced some years ago.

The administrative work of the department is largely in the hands of the superintendent, who is elected annually in June, and the secretary, usually in contact with the chairman of the committee.

The superintendent is the executive officer of the board and must combine the knowledge of the scholar, the ability of the business man, and the progressiveness of the reformer. His work begins early in the morning with the determination of the weather, if unsettled, and the probable inconvenience to 8,000 children, or the loss of a day's service of over 300 teachers. More charity should be shown the superintendent in this matter by parents and taxpayers, but it is hard to eradicate the prevalent idea, that the superintendent is personally responsible for the weather.

Arriving at the office, many letters must be read and answered, reports of contagious diseases received from the health department and transmitted to the different masters by telephone or messenger.

Substitutes must be provided for teachers unexpectedly absent, and as many as 12 have been called and furnished in one day. Interviews are granted to applicants for positions, to pupils and parents on a thousand different matters. The remainder of the forenoon and afternoon until 4 o'clock are taken up in visiting the different schools. After 4 the office is again

A BEAUTIFUL SIGHT

Dahlia Show On Farlow Hill Attracts Many Spectators

The dahlia farm of Mr. George A. Rawson on Farlow road, near Kenrick street and Waverley avenue in Newton has been attracting a large and fully deserved amount of attention during the past few days. There are thousands of blossoms, of every conceivable color and shape.

For the first impression, the visitor had better stand at the top of the hill and overlook the color emulsion before examining the individual plants. The bulbs have been planted in long rows with wide intervening lanes which permit a person to walk through to study the coloring and shape of each flower. All varieties are labeled so one admires a particularly fine flower he may learn its name.

The dahlias are not allowed to bloom during the summer and these large splendid blossoms are all the more appreciated in the fall when the gardens are waning.

Noted Women Suffragist Speaks at West Newton

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw gave an interesting address before a large audience at Players' Hall, West Newton, on Saturday evening, September 18th, on the question of Suffrage. Dr. Shaw was introduced by Rev. A. J. Muste of the Central Congregational Church of Newtonville. As Mr. Muste had made reference to the Bible in his opening remarks, Dr. Shaw first called attention to the frequent misuse of the Bible particularly by those who were in the habit of opposing all suggestions which these conditions are maintained and supported, and if good men would organize for the betterment of the conditions as bad men organize to keep these conditions, the good men would assist remarkably in solving many of the great problems of the day. The men who are organized against all matters for the common good are organized against Woman Suffrage. The good men are divided. If the good men were organized as the bad men, we would have had Suffrage long ago and also many other things which we have not got. The opponents of Suffrage have two lines of attack, the statistical line is the first. The other line is the questioning of the integrity

LARGE VOTE AT PRIMARY

McCall and Coolidge Received Big Vote and Allen, Weston and Jarvis Win Representative Nomination

The state primary held on Tuesday attracted considerable attention in this city where the contests on the Republican ticket between McCall and Cushing for governor, Coolidge and Ham for lieutenant-governor and Jarvis and Brimblecom for representative brought out the largest vote ever cast in a primary election. Possibly the abolition of party enrollment may also have had something to do with a vote of 2704 as compared with 2575 of last year. Mr. McCall swept the city, as well as the state, the vote being McCall 1584, Cushing 678, a plurality of 906, while Foss received but 84 votes. Mr. Cushing was ahead in but three precincts, Nonantum, Lower and Upper Falls. Coolidge was close behind McCall having 140 to Ham's 809, a majority of 62. Jarvis won the third nomination for representative. Messrs. Allen and Weston were renominated as a matter of course, with 1818 and 1836 respectively, while Alderman Jarvis won the third nomination with a vote of 1402 to 1321 for Brimblecom.

The other minor contests resulted in a vote for state auditor for Cook of 1092 with his opponents Bagley having 421 and George 541. For County Commissioner Williams led with 1255, Dyer having 588 and Penniman but 153. County Treasurer Hayden led his opponent Wilson with a vote of 1682 to 279, while Sheriff Fairbairn had 1814 to 332 for Messer.

The other candidates on the Republican ticket, were unopposed, with the following results,

Langtry, secretary 1889
Burrill, treasurer 1882
Atwill, attorney general 1932
Mulligan, councillor 1925
Ellis, senator 2041
Garcelon, state committee 1891
On the Democratic side, 203 ballots were cast, Governor Walsh having 181 to 9 for Dietrick, and the other contests on that ticket, for attorney general resulting in Donahue, 125, Williams, 46, and for sheriff, Donovan, 135 and Ferris 30. William J. Geegan, John P. Tierney and James A. Waters were nominated for representatives with 159, 161 and 154 votes respectively.

The Progressive ticket had 23 votes in the entire city with no contests and hardly any regularly nominated candidates.

It is evident that the newspapers had done good work in reminding the voters as to their limitations in marking the new form of ballot, for only 25 ballots were thrown aside in the whole city for improper marking. Ward 2, Precinct 3, losing the largest number, 7, in this manner, and Ward 4, Ward 5, Precinct 3 of Ward 5 and Ward 7 having a clean record in this respect.

The cumbersome ballot caused more or less trouble with the cancelling boxes, and in many of the precincts, the ballots were deposited in the ordinary

—o—

I wish to express my sincere gratitude to the many friends who, in spite of the misrepresentation and inuendoes which were circulated during the recent campaign, so loyally supported me for the Republican nomination for representative.

I especially appreciate the splendid endorsement of my neighbors and friends of Ward 7.

J. C. Brimblecom.

Mayor Childs will have the sympathy of the entire city in carrying out the order of the city government for the establishment of a Bureau of Markets for this city.

The Graphic seldom differs from the action of the board of aldermen but in this particular case, it does not seem as if the usual careful consideration had been given to the subject. Just why the local business men should take the pains to go to a statued place, a mile or so out of their way, to buy produce, which the average farmer is now delivering to them on the floor of the store is a question many would like to have answered in a satisfactory manner. Just how the new Bureau of Markets is going to make the farmers sell their produce at a rate low enough to induce the local merchant to purchase of him, even if he does go to the market place, is another simple problem, and why, if there is any retail trade at the proposed market place, the city should use the tax payers money to provide competition between farmers from other communities and men who pay rent and taxes in this city, seems to be the most important question of all.

A statement at this time of the ownership of the NEWTON GRAPHIC may be of interest to our many readers.

The GRAPHIC is owned by a Massachusetts corporation, with a fully paid in capital of $13,500. This corporation was organized for the benefit of the editor and publisher, and the stock is entirely in the hands of himself and his personal friends. For further protection, it has been placed in the hands of three trustees, so that the individual holders have no direct voice in its management. As a matter of fact, this trusteeship has not been at all necessary, for during the fifteen years this corporation has existed, the editor has never been approached directly or indirectly by any of the stockholders, or any attempts made to influence the policy of the paper in any way. The editor has been and is, solely responsible for its attitude on all matters discussed in its editorial columns.

The GRAPHIC intends to view every subject from the single standpoint of the best interests of the city of Newton, and will endeavor to present that point of view in as fair and candid a manner as possible.

The state primary on Tuesday gave the Republican party a most excellent ticket in McCall for governor and Coolidge for Lieutenant governor. With the vigorous campaign which Mr. McCall is fully able to make, there is a splendid opportunity for the Republicans to regain the governorship and the complete control of the state government.

—o—

The request of the aldermen that the mayor recommend a supplementary budget for overtime in the Engineers' department, is the first action of the kind under the Municipal Finance law. If the mayor does not comply with the request of the aldermen by a two-thirds vote can make the appropriation without his consent.

—o—

Now let us all get together and keep Middlesex County in the Republican column, where it belongs, by giving Sheriff Fairbairn, County Treasurer Hayden and County Commissioner Williams, old fashioned Republican majorities.

Mr. Frank W. Stearns, of this city, as chairman of the Coolidge campaign committee, has produced results which have put him well within the political limelight.

Our local board of health is making excellent progress in the work of inspecting the farms and dairies, from which the milk supply of this city is drawn.

Boston Transcript
Saturday, September 25, 1915.

Automobile collisions and accidents are becoming almost a daily occurrence in Nonantum square and if it was not for the vigilance of Officer Purcell, they would be more than trivial. Something ought to be done in the near future to remedy this state of affairs, before a fatal accident takes place. It is recalled that Washington street was not widened until the death of Chief Bixby of the Fire Department created so much public opinion that the work was actually done. Nonantum square may prove to be a similar situation.

Senator George H. Ellis led the ticket in this city and will easily be re-elected in November. He's the right man in the right place.

Just a little over five weeks for the suffragists and the anti-suffragists to campaign. Just watch the fun.

NEWTON CENTRE PLAYGROUND

At a meeting of the Playground Building Committee held on Monday, September 29th, the Publication Committee was requested to prepare a statement of the work of the committee and the progress of the work on the remodeling of the building given by Trinity Parish for playground purposes. In accordance with this request the Publication Committee submits the following statement:

As soon as the results of the canvas for subscriptions were known, a Building Committee was appointed and empowered to employ an architect and to execute contracts for the removal of the building and its remodeling, all at a cost not exceeding the amount of pledges and cash on hand. Mr. Stevens' preliminary sketches were sent to all the architects in the village and all were invited to make additional sketches or suggestions. Several good suggestions were received, but Mr. Edward B. Stratton was the only architect who expressed himself as being willing and able to take up the work. Mr. Stratton prepared plans which were accepted by the committee and under which work has progressed. Pen and ink sketches of the exterior of the building have been on exhibition in the windows of local stores.

Mr. Stratton has been indefatigable in his efforts to get what was wanted, for as little money as possible and to accomplish the very difficult task of giving an artistic touch to a very plain building without extensive exterior remodeling, and it is believed that the building when completed will not only be an artistic success, but what is more important, the interior arrangements and accommodations will be adequate for the purposes for which they are designed. The basement is high and well ventilated and will be entered at grade at the northerly side of the playground. The superintendent's room is in the center on the north front and on either side of this room are the lavatories, showers, and toilets. Those on the west end are for the boys and those on the east end are for the girls, the two being entirely cut off and separate from each other. The south side of the basement contains the heating plant and two separate and distinct locker rooms, one connecting with the girls' lavatories and the other with that of the boys. The lavatories are light and spacious and so constructed as to permit of easily flushing with the hose. It is expected that the basement, which is one of the most important factors in our field house, will be furnished and equipped and ready for use in a comparatively short time.

As Trinity Parish reserved the privilege of using the main auditorium until its new church building is ready for occupancy, very little work can be done in the way of improvements in that part of the building for several months. When permanent possession of the main auditorium is obtained a broad stairway will be built at each end to connect with the basement, a new floor will be laid and the hall, as it will then be, will be put in shape for basket ball, other athletic games, concerts, etc.

With the exception of the work of removing the robes room and putting in the rods at a total cost of $125, every bit of work on the building from the moving to the completion of the last detail has been set by contract to be performed and in each case served by the lowest bidder, of which there have been several for each contract.

DEATH OF MISS ELLIS

Miss Mary Agnes Ellis, daughter of the late Charles W. Ellis and granddaughter of the late Ex-Governor Clappin of Newtonville, passed away Tuesday morning at Needham, after a long period of failing health. Miss Ellis had spent the greater part of her life in Newtonville, where she had made many intimate and lasting friendships. She was a member of Central Congregational Church and showed a generous willingness to be helpful in every good work which enlisted her sympathies.

Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon in the chapel at the Newton Cemetery. Rev. Jay T. Stocking of Washington, formerly pastor of Central Church conducted an impressive service at 3 o'clock. Sacred selections were rendered by the Central Church quartet.

There were many beautiful floral tributes and the burial was in the Newton Cemetery.

A WELL balanced meal is the following, the chops being cooked in a way that makes them especially digestible:

Makes Chops Tender.

Braised Lamb Chops.—Wipe the chops, put into covered pan and into hot oven twenty minutes. Then dust with a little salt and pepper, add a cupful of cold water, reduce the heat of oven and roast for thirty minutes. Add a little more water if needed to make a cupful. Serve with the following gravy: Add a tablespoonful of flour, which has been mixed with a little cold water, a little salt and pepper; boil until it thickens, add a tablespoonful of caramel and strain.

A Dainty Entree.

Nut and Potato Croquettes.—Take two cupfuls of hot rice potatoes and to them add three tablespoonsful of cream, half a teaspoonful of salt, an eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper, a few grains of cayenne and a few drops of onion juice. Beat and add one egg yolk. Cook one-fourth of a cupful of bread crumbs with one-fourth of a cupful of cream until of the consistency of a thick paste. Then add half an egg yolk, and salt to taste. Cool and add pecan nut meats broken in pieces, using as many nuts as will be held together by the paste. Shape potato mixture in small nests, fill nests with nut mixt., cover with potato mixture and roll into balls. Dip in crumbs, egg and crumbs, fry in deep fat, and drain on brown paper.

Dainty and Novel Salad.

Salad in Aspic Jelly.—Serve on a bed of crisp watercress with the salad heaped up in the center of the jelly ring, which is made in this way: Whip stiff a cupful of thick cream, and into this stir a cupful of strong aspic jelly. Cool it, and before it is quite set add a small quantity of potted or very finely minced cooked ham. Combine ingredients with the egg whip, color pink and pack in the mold.

Baked Pudding.—Take four level tablespoonsfuls of butter, a cupful of sugar, one egg, a cupful of milk, two cupfuls of flour and three level teaspoonsfuls of baking powder. Cream the butter and sugar, add the egg and milk and sift in flour and baking powder. Bake and serve with sauce.

WITH SWEET POTATOES.
SOUTHERN housewives know how to serve the sweet potato to perfection and are skilled in a variety of ways of preparing this delicious food. The following methods recommended by a famous chef may be of interest:

A Baked Puff.

Sweet Potato Puff.—Roll five medium sized sweet potatoes. When done mash through a potato ricer. Add butter the size of an egg, a quarter teaspoonful of cinnamon, two eggs, one heaping tablespoonful of brown sugar and four tablespoonsfuls of milk. Cream well together, pour into buttered pudding dish in which it is to be served and bake in oven till brown.

Sweet Potatoes and Pork.—Boil, peel and mash a sufficient quantity of sweet potatoes and moisten with butter and egg. With them cover the bottom of a deep dish; then put on a layer of slices of cooked pork and sprinkle with sage and marjoram. Next another layer of sweet potatoes, then another layer of pork and so on until the dish is full. Finish with a layer of sweet potato and bake till hot and brown on the surface.

Palatable and Nourishing.

Sweet Potato Croquettes.—Take one pint of boiled, mashed, steamed or baked sweet potatoes, add the beaten yolks of two eggs; season to taste with salt and pepper. RESUMES MEETINGS

OCCUPATION AND MORTALITY

A man's occupation has much to do with his length of life. For instance, among locomotive engineers the death rate is nearly 60 per cent than that of men in non-hazardous employments. This is equivalent to a cutting off of 5 years from the average life time. Among saloon proprietors, whether these men attend bar or not, there is an extra mortality of about 70 per cent. This reduces the lifetime by about 6 years. The same figures relate to hotel proprietors who occasionally, or regularly, attend bar. Many men are engaged in sedentary occupations, or in work that wears on the nerves. Others are engaged in work requiring them to keep irregular hours, to eat at irregular times, to suffer from poor lighting or improper ventilation. Such men need exercise, air, a swimming pool—not merely in the short summer vacation period, but the year round. The Y. M. C. A. of Newton offers these advantages, and at such a nominal cost as to make the privileges all the more accessible and desirable. Longer life is to be had through the opportunities offered by the gymnasium and swimming pool. Phone the Y. M. C. A. for membership card, and begin at once a new lease of life.

A Roofing That Is Cheaper by the Year

You can buy "just as good" roofings for very little and they are worth just what you pay for them. They cost less by the foot but more by the year of service. Drop in and see

Pronounced "RU" as in RUBY
RU-BER-OID
ROOFING
COSTS MORE - WEARS LONGER.

We have stamped RU-BER-OID "O. K.—A. I." because we know it is the square deal roofing. Customers tell us so right along. It is fire-resisting, weatherproof and wear-proof and it saves repair bills wherever it is used.

In many instances RU-BER-OID is still weatherproof after more than 20 years of service. You can buy cheaper roofings—but sooner or later you are bound to find out why they are cheaper.

RU-BER-OID is the long run roofing built for permanence and all-weather-exposure.

The U. S. Court of Appeals has recently enjoined imitators from using the word "Rubberoid" or any similar name as the trade name or brand" of their roofing.

When you are in this neighborhood again, stop in—you'll be interested in RU-BER-OID. We sell the genuine with the "Ru-ber-oid Man" (shown above) on every roll.

visited, the afternoon mail answered and with one or more committee meetings to attend, the day is brought to a close.

Meetings of the masters and teachers are frequently held, although at no stated hours. Schedules are made up each month and it is the custom to hold meetings of teachers of one grade throughout the city, with leaders and subjects assigned for discussion and instruction.

Possibly the most important and delicate work of the superintendent and school committee is the selection of the 312 teachers who constitute the working force of the department. Under a recent state law, every teacher who has been elected and re-elected for three years is then placed on the permanent list of the department and is not subject to an annual election. The greater portion of the 312 teachers in this city are now on that list. New teachers are elected by the school committee, and by state law, must be persons who have been recommended by the superintendent.

Applications for positions are filed with the superintendent together with such notes or references as may be required. When new teachers are needed, the applications for that particular grade are examined by the superintendent, and the most promising investigated by personal visits to their present schools, if any, and a recommendation made to the committee. The superintendent has authority to make temporary appointments in emergencies, reporting the facts to the board.

Under the merit system, no established rate of wages are paid, but the value of each teacher is determined and fixed by the school committee. Usually teachers with some experience are paid a salary of $700 at the beginning, and if they have not been increased to at least $750 by the end of two years, they are not re-elected. The average salary in the Newton schools ranges from $950 to $1000. Inexperienced teachers are usually appointed as building assistants, that is to say they are given work as general assistants in some one school building, working under the direction of the principal.

In addition to the merit system, the department also endeavors to give teachers what is known as a Sabbatical year, a leave of absence of one year, at half pay after working for seven years. Teachers receiving this leave must agree to take a course of study approved by the superintendent during their absence and to stay at least three years with the city after their return. The committee believes that it is good business policy to improve the quality of our teachers at such small expense, the net additional cost to the city in each of the present cases is but $250. It is a phase of the merit system, and attracts the best teachers from other places. While the idea is practically new in the public schools, only a few having adopted it to date, it is an established custom in most of the colleges. The average tax payer will agree that a good school teacher needs as much in this line as college professors and if it can be obtained at such slight expense, it would seem desirable to adopt it permanently.

The cost of our schools has been the subject of considerable controversy between the school committee on the one hand and the board of aldermen, on the other, as the latter body has the sole responsibility of fixing the total amount to be expended for educational purposes. For the past ten years our school expenses have been increasing by leaps and bounds, the total maintenance appropriation in 1904-1905 was $241,000 and an average cost per pupil of $40.32 while in 1913-1914, the last available school report, the total cost was $384,000 and an average cost of $52.12 per pupil. The figures for the present year are practically $400,000. The school committee and the city government are now working under a so called gentlemen's agreement that the cost per pupil shall not be increased and that the maintenance appropriation shall be based on the present average cost per pupil and determined by the enrolment of the schools. Newton is most unfortunately situated for an economical administration of its schools. Its scattered population, the necessity of giving every part of the city exactly the same facilities in education, regardless of the density or sparsity of population, and the natural demand for first class school buildings everywhere, makes it impossible to save money in this department and do the right kind of work.

The geographical situation, besides increasing the number of masters and teachers by reason of the scattered districts, also reduces the size of the classes. In Newton Centre one year, for instance, one grade which had had from 80 to 85 pupils, in two rooms, increased to 100 at the opening of the school term. It was therefore necessary to make three classes in this grade, and to employ one additional teacher. In a compact city it would have been possible to have so changed the district lines as to assign the pupils into other school buildings.

In addition to the difficulties of a scattered population, Newton has a far larger proportion of its pupils in the high school than any other place in the United States. It is said that the average high school attendance would be from 10 to 12 1/2 per cent of the total school enrolment. The figures for Newton show that 2030 of a total of 8158 enrolled are in the various High Schools, practically 25 per cent of the enrolment.

It is these things, small in themselves, which make the cost of our schools seem large. And yet, compared with the percentage of revenue devoted to educational purposes, Newton is by no means first. The figures show that 31 cities in the state pay a larger proportion of their revenue for educational purposes. Newton pays $3.99 per $1,000 valuation for schools, Malden pays $5.80, Haverhill $5.89, Chelsea $6.89, and Salem $4.32. Springfield, which has often been compared with Newton as to quality of its schools, pays 4.32 of its revenue for this purpose.

Instead of the one High School of former times, which usually fitted pupils for college, Newton now has three distinct High Schools, the Classical course, which occupies the older building, a Technical High School which is divided between the old and the new buildings, and a Vocational High School wholly within the newer building. The last division has been made within a few years and was done in order that the city might be entitled to receive aid from the state for work along vocational lines. It is interesting to note in this connection that the late Frank A. Day, generously maintained for five years the predecessor of this Vocational High School, then known as the Newton Independent Industrial school and located in Nonantum. The Classical High school has an enrolment of 862, the Technical High of 782 and the Vocational High, 386. There are 5381 pupils in the grade schools and 767 in the kindergartens.

Evening schools are maintained at Newtonville and the Upper Falls during the winter season, and attract a large attendance from our foreign-born population, 19 nationalities being represented last year. The work has increased amazingly during the past five years, the appropriation having about doubled in that time. The work is mostly elementary, fully half the attendants taking the first and second grade work, with a few doing grammar school work.

There is also an Evening Vocational High school with courses in commercial studies and in shop work.

The vacation school work, which began as a philanthropic movement some years ago on the part of our Women's clubs has become a part of our school system the past year, although the ladies still keep up their interest in the work. For six weeks, industrial work and manual training are taught at Nonantum and Newton. The children are taught carpentry, cooking, basket work, gardening, millinery and all kinds of industrial work. The attendance has been large and enthusiastic.

The kindergartens are very popular in Newton, 767 pupils attending the 14 maintained in various parts of the city. Children are admitted between 4 and 6 years of age and one session a day is held.

Pupils completing the grammar course ending with the eighth grade are awarded a certificate signed by the master of the school and the chairman of the ward committee. Without this certificate, applicants for admission must take an examination, opportunity for which is given in June, and again in September. The graduates of the High School are also awarded diplomas. Admission to the lower grades is obtained by new pupils upon applying to the master of the district, who assigns the pupil to the proper grade through an informal examination. A vaccination certificate is also required.

It is interesting to learn from the last report of the school committee that the cost of the different school departments were as follows,

Kindergartens, $18,600, Grades,

$197,600 Classical High $53,250, Technical High $50,600 and Vocational High

Recent labor laws requiring certificates before children of school age are allowed to work, has required the establishment of a separate department to handle the school census, which is taken in September each year and which includes considerable data of every child in the city between 5 and 15 years of age, and the making of certificates, based on the facts thus ascertained.

The secretary of the committee now only has the care of the records of the departments, and a large amount of correspondence, but she has charge, under direction of the superintendent of the large amount of supplies necessary for a large department. Twice each year the masters of the school submit requisitions for supplies of paper, pencils, pens, chalk and the many small articles necessary in school work. These requests are examined and revised by the superintendent and transmitted to the secretary, who usually makes the purchases from bids received from manufacturers or dealers. Books are purchased in the same way. Something over $20,000 is spent for these supplies each year. From two to three thousand school books are usually rebound each year, the work being done in the summer vacation.

The truant officer is a busy man and invaluable to the department. Fortunately the amount of truancy in Newton is small, but what there is has often required the services of three horses. The truant officer reports at the superintendent's office twice each day, to receive the notices of suspicious absences from the various masters, and fully 75 per cent of these reported are returned to the schools within an hour. The business requires a thorough knowledge of boy life, and the golf links and woods are frequently visited by the truant man.

He also comes across many sad cases of poverty and neglect and can tell pathetic stories of finding children kept from school for lack of shoes, dresses and coats.

The school buildings and grounds are under the care of the various janitors and engineers, who are responsible to the superintendent for the condition of the heating, ventilating and for cleanliness. School floors are thoroughly washed three times a year, at each vacation period, and are swept whenever required by the master.

The space of this article forbids the mention of many matters of interest, but other features of school work will be given in the future, in order that full knowledge of this important department may be made public.

The Exploits of Elaine

A Detective Novel and a Motion Picture Drama

By ARTHUR B. REEVE
The Well-Known Novelist and the Creator of the "Craig Kennedy" Stories

Presented in Collaboration With the Pathé Players and the Electric Film Company
Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company All Foreign Rights Reserved

SYNOPSIS.

The New York police are mystified by a series of murders and other crimes. The principal clue to the criminal is the warning letter which is sent to the victims, signed with a "Clutching Hand." The latest victim of the mysterious assassin is Taylor Dodge, the insurance president. His daughter, Elaine, employs Craig Kennedy, the famous scientific detective, to try to unravel the mystery. What Kennedy accomplishes is told by his friend Jameson, a newspaperman, who writes at the determined effort which Elaine and Craig Kennedy are making to put an end to their crimes. The Clutching Hand, as this strange criminal is known, resorts to all sorts of the most diabolical schemes to put them out of the way. Each chapter of the story tells of a new plot against their lives and of the way the great detective uses all his skill to save this pretty girl and himself from death.

THIRTEENTH EPISODE

THE DEVIL WORSHIPERS.

Elaine was seated in the drawing room with Aunt Josephine one afternoon, when her lawyer, Perry Bennett, dropped in unexpectedly.

He had hardly greeted them when the butler, Jennings, in his usual impassive manner announced that Aunt Josephine was wanted on the telephone.

No sooner were Elaine and Bennett alone than Elaine, turning to him, exclaimed:

"Last night I dreamed that father came to me and told me that if I would give up Kennedy and put my trust in you, I would find the Clutching Hand. I don't know what to think of it."

Bennett, who had been listening intently, moved over nearer to Elaine and bent over her.

"Elaine," he said in a low tone, his remarkable eyes looking straight into her own, "you must know that I love you. Then give me the right to protect you. It was your father's dearest wish, I believe, that we should marry. Let me share your dangers and I swear that sooner or later there will be an end to the Clutching Hand. Give me your answer, Elaine," he urged, "and make me the happiest man in all the world."

Elaine listened, and not unsympathetically, as Bennett continued to plead for her answer.

"Wait a little while—until tomorrow," she replied finally.

"Let it be as you wish, then," agreed Bennett quietly.

He took her hand and kissed it passionately.

An instant later Aunt Josephine returned. Elaine, unstrung by what had happened, excused herself and went into the library.

Involuntarily, her mind traveled back over the rapid succession of events of the past few weeks and the part that she had thought, at least, Kennedy had come to play in her life.

Then she thought of their recent misunderstanding. Might there not be some simple explanation of it, after all, which she had missed? What should she do?

She solved the problem by taking up the telephone and asking for Kennedy's number.

I was chatting with Craig in his laboratory, and, at the same time, was watching him in his experimental work. Just as a call came on the telephone, he was pouring some nitro-hydrochloric acid into a test tube to complete a reaction.

The telephone tinkled and he laid down the bottle of acid on his desk, while he moved a few steps to answer the call.

Whoever the speaker was, Craig seemed deeply interested, and, not knowing who was talking on the wire, I was eager to learn whether it was anyone connected with the case of the Clutching Hand.

"Yes, this is Mr. Kennedy," I heard Craig say.

I moved over toward him and whispered eagerly, "Is there anything new?"

A little impatient at being interrupted, Kennedy waved me off. It occurred to me that he might need a pad and pencil to make a note of some information, and I reached over the desk for them.

As I did so my arm inadvertently struck the bottle of acid, knocking it over on the top of the desk. Its contents streamed out saturating the telephone wires before I could prevent it. In trying to right the bottle my hand came in contact with the acid which burned like liquid fire, and I cried out in pain.

Craig hastily laid down the receiver, seized me and rushed me to the back of the laboratory, where he drenched my hand with a neutralizing liquid.

He bound up the wounds caused by the acid, which proved to be slight, after all, and then returned to the telephone.

To his evident annoyance, he discovered that the acid had burned through the wires and cut off all connection.

At the other end of the line, Elaine was listening impatiently for a response to her first eager words of inquiry. She was astonished to find,

Jennings entered with a card on a salver. Elaine took it and saw with surprise the name of her caller:

MADAME SAVETSKY, Medium.

Beneath the engraved name were the words written in ink: "I have a message from the spirit of your father."

"Yes, I will see her," cried Elaine eagerly, in response to the butler's inquiry.

She followed Jennings into the adjoining room and there found herself face to face with the hard-featured woman who had only a few moments before left the Clutching Hand.

Elaine looked rather than spoke her inquiry.

"Your father, my dear," purred the medium, with a great pretense of suppressed excitement, "appeared to me the other night from the spirit world. I was in a trance and he asked me to deliver a message to you."

"What was the message?" asked Elaine breathlessly, now aroused to intense interest.

"I must go into a trance again to get it," replied the insinuating Savetsky, "and if you like I can try it at once, provided we can be left alone long enough."

Seated in her chair, the medium muttered wildly for a few moments, rolled her eyes and with some convulsive movements pretended to go into a trance.

Suddenly the curtains were pulled aside and Aunt Josephine and Bennett, who had just come in, entered. "I can do nothing here," exclaimed Savetsky, starting up and looking about severely. "You must come to my seance chamber where we shall be interrupted."

"I will," said Elaine, vexed at the intrusion at that moment. "I must have that message—I must."

"What's all this, Elaine?" demanded Aunt Josephine.

Hurriedly, Elaine poured forth to her aunt and Bennett the story of the medium's visit and the promised message from her father in the other world.

Aunt Josephine, who was not one easily to be imposed on, strongly objected to Elaine's proposal to accompany Savetsky to the seance chamber, but Elaine would not be denied.

"It might be safe for Elaine to go," Bennett finally suggested to Aunt Josephine, "if you and I accompanied her."

A few moments later, in the Dodge car, Elaine, the medium and her two escorts started for the Chinese quarters.

At the house the medium opened the door with her key and ushered in her three visitors.

Entering the room, the medium at once prepared for the seance by pulling down the window shades.

Suddenly an indistinct face was seen to be peering through the black curtains. A voice, deep, sepulchral, was heard in slow and solemn tones.

"I am Eeko—the spirit of Taylor Dodge. I will give no message until one named Josephine leaves the room."

No sooner had the words been uttered than the medium came writhing out of her trance.

"What happened?" she asked, looking at Elaine.

Elaine reported the spirit's words. "We can get nothing if your aunt stays here," Savetsky added, insisting Elaine Is Forced to Kotow to the Gruesome Metallic Figure.

that Aunt Josephine must go. "Your father cannot speak while she is present."

Aunt Josephine, annoyed by what she had heard, indignantly refused to go and was deaf to all Elaine's pleadings.

"I think it will be all right," finally acquiesced Bennett, seeing how bent Elaine was on securing the message. "I'll stay and protect her."

Aunt Josephine finally agreed. "Very well, then," she protested, marching out of the room in a high state of indignation.

They passed through the passage-way of the fireplace and, having entered the seance room, Clutching Hand began briefly explaining the purpose of the preparations that had been made. Long Sin wagged his head in approval.

Elaine was standing in the library gazing sadly at Kennedy's portrait, thinking over recent events and above all the rebuff over the telephone which she supposed she had received.

there came a knock at the door and I opened it hurriedly. There was a messenger boy who handed me a note, I tore it open. It was from Kennedy and read: "I shall probably be away for two or three days. Call up Elaine and tell her to beware of a certain Madame Savetsky."

I was still puzzling over the note and was just about to call up Elaine when the speaking tube was blown and to my surprise I found that it was Aunt Josephine who had called.

"Where is Mr. Kennedy?" she asked, greatly agitated. "He has gone away for a few days," I replied blankly. "Is there anything I can do?"

She was very excited and hastily related what had happened at the parlor of the medium.

"What was her name?" I cried anxiously.

"Madame Savetsky," she replied, to my surprise.

Astounded, I picked up Craig's note from the desk and handed it to her without a word. She read it with breathless eagerness.

"Come back there with me, please," she begged, almost frantic with fear now. "Something terrible may have happened."

Aunt Josephine had hardly left Savetsky when the trance was resumed.

Suddenly, from the mysterious shadows of the cabinet, there appeared the spirit of Long Sin, whose death Elaine still believed she had caused when Adventurous Mary had lured her to the apartment.

Elaine was trembling with fear at the apparition.

As before, a strange voice sounded in the depths of the cabinet and again a message was heard, in low, solemn tones:

"I am Keka, and I have with me Long Sin. His blood cries for vengeance."

Elaine was overcome with horror at the words.

Then a dim, ghostly figure, apparently that of Long Sin, appeared.

With arms outstretched, the figure glided from the cabinet and approached Elaine. She shrank back farther in fright, too horrified even to scream.

At the same moment, the medium drew a vapor pistol from her dress, and, as the ghost of Long Sin leaped at Elaine, Savetsky darted forward and shot a stream of vapor full in Bennett's face.

Bennett dropped unconscious, the lights in the darkened room flashed up, and several of the men of the Clutching Hand rushed in.

Quickly the fireplace was turned on its cleverly constructed hinges, revealing the hidden passage.

Before any effective resistance could be made, Elaine and Bennett were hustled through the passage, securely bound, and placed on a divan in a curtained chamber back of the altar of the devil worshippers.

It was at that moment that I, little dreaming of what had been taking place, arrived with Aunt Josephine at the house of the medium.

She answered my ring and admitted us. To our surprise, the seance room was empty.

"Where is the young lady who was here?" I asked.

"Miss Dodge and the gentleman just left a few minutes ago," the medium explained, as we looked about.

I happened to notice a torn handkerchief lying on the floor. It flashed over me that perhaps it might afford a clue.

As I passed it, I purposely dropped my soft hat over it and picked up the hat, securing the handkerchief without attracting Savetsky's attention.

Aunt Josephine was keen now for returning home to find out whether Elaine was there or not. No sooner had she entered the car and driven off, than I examined the handkerchief. It was torn, as if it had been crushed in the hand during a struggle and wrenched away. I looked closer. In the corner was the initial "E."

That was enough. Without losing another precious moment I hurried around to the nearest police station.

The sergeant detailed several roundsmen and a man in plain clothes, and together we returned to the house, laying a careful plan to surround it secretly, while the plainclothes man and I obtained admittance.

Meanwhile, the Chinese devil worshippers had again gathered in their conscript temple and Long Sin, in his priestly robe, appeared on the dais.

The worshippers kotowed reverently to him, while at the back again stood the aged Chinaman patiently turning his prayer wheel.

Two braziers, or smoke pots, had been placed on the dais, one of which Long Sin touched with a stick, causing it to burst out into dense fumes.

Standing before them, he chanted in nasal tones: "The white consort of the great Ksing Chau has been found. It is his will that she now be made his."

As he finished intoning the message, Long Sin signaled to two young Chinamen to go into the anteroom. A moment later they returned with Elaine.

Frightened though she was, Elaine made no attempt to struggle, even when they had cut her bonds.

They carried her up to the dais, and now Long Sin faced her and sternly ordered her to kotow to the gruesome metallic figure.

She refused, but instantly the Chinamen seized her arm and twisted it, until they had compelled her to fall to her knees.

Having forced her to kotow, Long Sin turned to the assembled devil worshippers.

"With magic and rare drugs," he chanted, "she shall be made to pass beyond and her body encased in precious gold shall be the consort of Ksing Chau—forever and ever."

With callous devility, the oriental satanists made every arrangement for embalming and preserving the body of Elaine.

At last all seemed to be in readiness to proceed.

"Hold her," ordered Long Sin in guttural Chinese, to the two attendants, and as he approached her.

Long Sin held in his hand a small, profusely decorated pot from which smoke was escaping. As he approached he passed this receptacle under her nose once, twice, three times.

Gradually Elaine fell into unconsciousness.

While Elaine was facing death in the power of the devil worshippers, I had reached the house of Savetsky next door with the police, and the place had been quietly surrounded.

With the plainclothes man, a daring and intelligent fellow, I went to the door and rang the bell.

"What can I do for you?" asked the medium, admitting us.

"My friend here," I parleyed, "is in great business trouble. Can your controlling spirit give him advice?"

Savetsky set to work preparing the room for a seance. As he moved over to the window to pull down the shades

she must have caught sight of one or two of the policemen who had inadvertently exposed themselves from the hiding place in which I had disposed them before we entered. At any rate, Savetsky did not lose a jot of her remarkable composure.

"I'm sorry," she remarked merely, "but I'm afraid my control is weak and cannot work today."

She took a step toward the door, motioning us to leave. Neither of us paid any attention to the hint, but remained seated as we had been before.

Almost before I knew what she was doing, she made a dash for something in the corner of the room. It was time for open action, and I seized her quickly.

My detective was on his feet in an instant.

"I'll take care of her," he ground out, seized her wrists in his viselike grasp. "You give the signal."

I rushed to the window, threw up the shade and opened the sash, waving our preconcerted

Shall the Proposed Amendment to the Constitution Enabling Women to Vote be Approved and Ratified

The Massachusetts Woman's Suffrage Association and the Men's Committee entertained at luncheon the Governors or ex-Governors of nine equal suffrage States recently. The executives present were Governors William Spry of Utah, Arthur Capper of Kansas, Edward F. Dunne of Illinois, Moses Alexander of Idaho, George W. P. Hunt of Arizona, Ernest Lister of Washington and Samuel V. Stewart of Montana, and ex-Governors Alva Adams and Elias M. Ammons of Colorado and Joseph M. Carey of Wyoming. All of them said that the effect of equal suffrage in their States had been excellent.

Mrs. Teresa A. Crowley presided and the tables were flanked with great bunches of yellow flowers and birds on the walls.

Governor Stewart of Montana, the first speaker, said that suffrage was new in his State, but that all doubt as to how the women would line up was settled at the first election. On the whole he felt that the women voted more intelligently than the men. Governor Dunne of Illinois declared that in his State women undertook to clean up aggressive corporate interests—a job which the men had shirked. From 1906 on he had always stood for votes for women, and he believed that if a male vote on the question of equal suffrage in Illinois were now taken it would result heavily in favor of the women.

"Woman State officials in Utah," said Governor Spry, "have been on the whole about 100 per cent. better all round than the men."

The respects of Governor Lister of Washington were paid to former Judge Snell of that State, who recently has come out publicly against equal suffrage. Governor Lister called upon Judge Snell and his friends, if any believe as the judge does, to invoke the initiative and referendum to put an end to women's voting in Washington.

Governor Capper of Kansas related that in 1867 Lucy Stone wrote to the Governor of Kansas, Crawford, urging woman suffrage; and he was particularly glad to tell his hearers that the political seed had been sown from Massachusetts.

Other speakers were Governor Hunt of Arizona, Governor Carlson and former Governors Adams and Ammons of Colorado, Governor Alexander of Idaho, Governor Spry of Utah, and former Governor Carey of Wyoming.

Several of the Governors also spoke at a suffrage meeting at Faneuil Hall given by the Cambridge Equal Suffrage League.

"It would be wrong to speak against liberty in this hall where orators thundered for abolition 50 years ago," said ex-Governor Alva Adams. "It is only the Puritan prejudice about a woman's place in the world which has withheld from her the ballot."

When woman suffrage comes in this way will it bring the permanent evil consequences the antisuffragists maintain? I doubt it.

It is objected to woman suffrage that women should give their time to marriage, childbearing, to the rearing of their children and to the promotion of domestic happiness; that they do this because of their natural instincts and tastes and their refinement, and that to send them out into the world to contend as part of the electorate in canvasses and elections and to serve in office will destroy the home, deprive them of their charm, interfere with the rearing of children, and rob life for both men and women of its happiness. When we consider how few men of the twenty millions of men who have the right to cast votes in this country lose any appreciable time in discharging their political duties, we may well conclude that the amount of time that the average woman will lose through the franchise will not be enough to interfere with her performing the family duties she now has.

The granting of the franchise will result in the election of only a very small number of women to office. In the states where for years they have had the franchise the election of a woman to office has always been noted as exceptional. A man's activities and experience outside of the home in matters analogous to public business will suggest him, rather than a woman, for its discharge. Moreover, when it comes to the election of a woman there is little danger that the female electors as a class will, as a habit, vote for her just because she is a woman.

We should be blind if we did not recognize that the higher and wider education of women, the added interest many of them are taking in public affairs, in parochial matters, in philanthropy and charity, the economic pressure upon many of them to enlarge their business and wage-earning activities beyond the domestic circle and into closer association with matters outside the home, have changed considerably the conventional relation of woman to man in general society. Women are more independent than they used to be. They have to be under existing conditions and it is well that they should be. It is not physical disability, but convention, that has excluded them from many avenues of livelihood. The Great War has forced upon the peoples of the belligerent nations the use of women in branches of service that have been monopolized by men heretofore, and this test of their availability for wider fields of labor will have a permanent result in opening to them new opportunities.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

Supposing that you were given the opportunity at a ridiculously small price—considering the spectacle offered—to occupy a reserved seat at a grand stand which commanded a fine view of such historic scenes as the actual Battle of Gettysburg, Sherman's March to the Sea, the last stand at Petersburg, the Assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, Lee's Surrender to Grant, the tragic and wild rides of the Ku Klux Klan, the destruction of entire cities by fire, wonderful artillery duels, miles of trench fighting, in fact war as it actually is—would you not jump at the opportunity?

You undoubtedly would. Well, that is practically just what is offered to the spectator in "The Birth of a Nation" which is at the Majestic Theatre, Boston, and which enters on its 26th wonderful week next Monday, Sept. 27. No other attraction has achieved such a record in a theatre in Boston in several seasons, and it is the more remarkable when it is considered that two performances daily have been given throughout the engagement.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE—"The Miracle Man," that extraordinary play by George Cohan dramatized and presented last year, will be the bill next week at the Castle Square Theatre. The piece has an ingeniously presented religious theme, based on the miracle of faith, a distinct comedy element and many dramatic moments. The man of miracles, known as the Patriarch, dwells in the little town of Needley, Me. The influence he wields over the villagers keeps them in good health and spirits. To the town comes a quartette of New York crooks who intend to exploit the Patriarch as a curer of all disease. How one by one they are reformed by the tremendous influence for good that the old man exerts, is told in the four acts of the play.

In these days of wars, bloodshed, and destruction throughout the greater part of the world, it is interesting to note that America is not only at peace and striving to maintain this peace, but that while millions of young men in other nations are grasping for each other's throats that thousands of young Americans are battling for advancement in Commerce, Finance, Law, and the Industries.

The American Public School is our great bulwark of safety. In spite, however, of the liberality of the state, towns, and cities, but a small percentage of the community graduate from the High Schools, a majority being forced to go to work before their education is completed. Public Evening Schools are maintained throughout the land where those who are employed during the day may study at night to make up their deficiencies and prepare themselves to meet the demands of modern civilization.

Foremost among the great Evening Schools and the acknowledged leader is the great Evening School System of the Boston Young Men's Christian Association. During the past eighteen years this School has grown from four hundred to over three thousand students, and from offering the most elementary branches to the dignity of a University, operating seven great schools several of them of college grade, and expending a sum equal to that appropriated by many of the largest cities in New England.

The School of Automobile Engineering teaching every phase of that industry, with the exception of building of new cars, with garage, machine shop, lectures and road work, and attended each year by nearly one thousand students who come from all parts of this country and Canada.

The Evening Preparatory School fitting for all higher universities of learning, and offering an equivalent of a good day High School course. It is the only Evening Preparatory School certificates from which are recognized by colleges.

The Evening Polytechnic School offering two, three and four year college courses in Chemistry and Chemical Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Structural Engineering, Railroad Engineering, and Municipal Engineering. This school has a faculty of twenty-one technically trained professors and graduates of great Technical Schools, is provided with Laboratories, drafting rooms, shops and liberal equipment, and turns out each year a large number of competent men who enter there various professions. This school also offers complete courses in Drafting, Mathematics, Freehand Drawing, Physics, and other subjects.

The School of Co-operative Engineering is a part time school, open to High School graduates only, in which the students work two weeks and go to School two weeks, working alternately in pairs and being paid while working. These students are secured positions with the leading Public Service and Manufacturing Corporations, and at the completion of the course of four years have earned their tuition and clothes, find themselves employed at good wages, and the world is before them.

The School of Commerce and Finance is the third largest of its kind in America, and offers three and four year college courses in accounting, business administration, brokerage, bond salesmanship, public welfare, law, salesmanship, and real estate. Seven hundred business men attended last year.

The Evening Law School opens its eighteenth year September 20. This school is the acknowledged leader among American Evening Law Schools, and has graduated hundreds of successful lawyers and business men. It is incorporated, grants the degree of LL.B. and is recognized throughout America.

The Evening School of Business offers all the courses of the regular Commercial School and other subjects not usually covered.

The Huntington School for Boys is an exclusive Day School feature, attended by nearly four hundred boys of representative American families, preparing for colleges, universities, technical schools, business, and several professions.

The Boston Young Men's Christian Association School system is exceeded in numbers by only two other Educational Institutions in New England, namely Harvard and Yale. Its reputation is world wide, and the opportunities it offers in its schools and Association plant are unparalleled. A visit to the Association Building is an inspiration. Costing over one million and a half, and equipped not only as a great school but with the largest gymnasium in New England, a wonderful salt water pool, social and recreation rooms, and all accommodations of a great hotel, it is a veritable bee-hive of industry where Young America is fitting his way to the top physically, morally, socially, and intellectually.

The people of New England are cordially invited to visit this great plant erected through the munificence of Boston's citizens, and see the greatest institution of its kind in the world in full operation.

Circulars of all departments are cheerfully sent upon request.

WILBUR THEATRE—"Nobody Home" at the Wilbur Theatre will continue at Ye Wilbur Theatre, but one week more beginning Monday, September 27th. Therefore this is the last opportunity the players of Boston and New England will have to enjoy one of the most delightful musical comedies presented in years. Lawrence Grossmith, the English comedian playing the title role has gained many friends during his stay here. One of the hits of the performance being his rendition of a delightful lyric entitled "Bed, Beautiful Bed," which he delivers with a finesse never before equalled on any stage. Adele Rowland, in the leading feminine role is most captivating. Quentin Tod and Helen Clarke are quite the best dancers Boston has ever had. The music of "Nobody Home" is delightfully syncopating and sends you away from the theatre whistling and singing combined with a feeling of regret that the performance is over.

YOUNG AMERICA FIGHTING FOR THE TOP
